WRIGHT AEROPLANE GOES THREE MILES

Long Circular Flight Is Accomplished with Perfect Control Shown by Inventors.

SPEED SIXTY MILES AN HOUR

Slight Trouble with Gas Engine—Army Balloon Flies Over the Washington Capitol.

Special to The New York Times.

MANTEO, N. C., May 13.—The Wright brothers' aeroplane made a flight of three miles at Kill Devil Hill to-day. The most remarkable thing about the flight was the presence of both the Wrights in the machine. They were unmistakably seen in it as the machine soared by a group of responsible observers, and then were seen to step from the machine when it halted.

The flight was made a little before noon. The sky was clear and a light wind blew from the southwest. Starting from the building in which the machine is kept, the course of the aeroplane was to the westward for three-quarters of a mile. Then it was almost at right angles. Reaching a sand hill at the end of the course, the machine was elevated so as to pass over the west end of it, after which its course was directed east for a quarter of a mile, the machine passing around the hill. Its course was then directed south toward the starting point, and on that tack it proceeded for about three-quarters of a mile.

The engine, then failing, the machine descended gracefully to the ground without accident, from an elevation of about twenty-five feet.

A marvelous circumstance connected with the long flight was the speed which it made in the air. It was up for not more than three minutes, and, therefore, its speed was about sixty miles an hour.

A short flight of three-quarters of a mile was made by the machine earlier in the day. That was stopped by a tree, which could not be avoided without danger. The machine was brought to the ground in an instant. It struck with considerable force, but both the navigator and machine escaped without injury.

The performances of the Wrights here, especially that of to-day, have greatly impressed those who have watched them. They have made no statements on what they have accomplished, and seem to regard their flights as mere tests.

Having seemingly mastered the new steering gear of the machine, they have now to contend with the unreliability of its gas engine. The engine of thirty horse power and weighing but 150 pounds is fully able to sustain the machine in flights as long as it runs, but its operation for any specified time cannot be guaranteed. The great heating of the piston rod and its bearings while the engine is in action seems to have been partly overcome.

WASHINGTON, May 13. — Carrying wireless telegraphy receiving apparatus for testing at various altitudes, and piloted by Lieut. Frank P. Lahm of the Signal Corps, who was accompanied by Major Edgar Russell and Capt. Charles S. Wallace, the big war balloon of the corps made another ascension from the southeastern part of Washington this afternoon.

The balloon took a northwesterly course, passing almost immediately over the dome of the Capitol at a height of about 900 feet. Arrangements were made whereby wireless messages were to be sent from the Naval Academy at Annapolis and from the Washington Navy Yard. To-day's efforts were confined to receiving messages.

An ascension with sending apparatus equipment will be made later.

C. H. CAFFIN RAPS ARTISTS.

Says Pictures in Carnegie Gallery Are of the Gingerbread School.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 13.—In an address before the Art Society of Pittsburg last evening, Charles H. Caffin, the art critic and author of New York, declared that this year's international exhibition at the Carnegie Gallery is the "yellow-scare-head debased journalism of art, the gingerbread and suggestiveness of the French school."

"It is the latest up-to-date sensationalism," he declared, "hung by a committee of sensationalists, and awarded by a jury of the same kind." Caffin took a fling at La Touche's contribution of this year, "Entr'acte in a Theatre," and added:

"It is no better than his abominably common picture, 'The Bath,' which that ridiculous jury awarded the first prize last year. It was essentially unmoral and outrageous, and formed a barrier between himself and the public. It was an imitation of the work of artists of fifty years ago, who were working out the kindergarten principles of art.

"Robert Henri's picture, 'Miss Edith Reynolds,' is a pity," declared Caffin, "a base calumny. The sex produces no woman so outrageous. The picture speaks, but it only says this: 'I am Henri. This is my way of painting. See the virility of it.'"

About the only good word he had for any of the paintings were those by Cecilia Beaux and Emil Carlsen.

POURED LEAD INTO HIS HEAD.

Died Yesterday After Recovering Faculties and Living Five Months.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 13.—James H. Conkling, a business man of this city, whom physicians have been watching for some time with great interest, died today. On Dec. 24 last Conkling, who is a tinsmith, was found on the floor of his shop unconscious.

It was found that his right ear and the cavities of the head were filled with hard lead. He had melted the lead, and, laying his head on a bench, poured the molten mass in his ear with suicidal intent. The lead was drilled out of the ear, but the surgeons dared not operate to remove the lead from the cavity back of the ear, as it lay so near the brain.

It was thought he could not live twenty-four hours. However, he recovered consciousness and his mental faculties. The brain partition was burned and recently blood poisoning set in. Mr. Conkling was a relative of Roscoe Conkling.

$1,000,000 TO GAMBLERS HERE

Jerome Aiding Pittsburg Authorities to Run Down Big Syndicate in This City.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 13.—District Attorney Gorshing has asked District Attorney Jerome of New York to take a hand in what threatens to be a most sensational gambling exposé.

The facts of the case came to public knowledge through the indictment yesterday afternoon of Frank T. Thompson and F. B. Ranger. They are charged with conspiracy to defraud certain wealthy Ohio men out of large amounts.

It is alleged that the men indicted are members of one of the greatest gangs of gamblers in the country. It is even said that one of this gang's victims was T. Lee Clark, cashier of the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny, who killed himself several years ago when his bank was closing. The story runs that Clark, at one sitting in New York, where he had been steered by the gang, lost $100,000 in a crooked faro game. This was immediately before his suicide. The District Attorney's office here is in possession of names and amounts of money taken through swindlers from Pittsburg business men in the last four years. It is alleged the amounts obtained will foot up to over $1,000,000.

Little could be learned yesterday from members of the District Attorney's staff in this city in regard to the Pittsburg gambling exposure. It was said, however, that detectives from Pittsburg had visited several houses in the uper part of the city.

They are said to have obtained information showing that a gambling syndicate nine months ago ran a house in West Sixty-eighth Street. Several prominent residents of Pittsburg are known to be pushing the investigation.

The gambling syndicate, it is said, worked its game by having its agents introduced to rich men. These persons were told that large profits were open to them in the New York gambling house.

FIREWORKS BLEW UP; 2 DYING.

July 4 Pyrotechnics Tear Building to Splinters and Strip Men.

The explosion of materials in the mixing room of a fire works factory at Barbey Street and Wortman Avenue, East New York, yesterday, blew a small building to pieces, tore a large hole in the ground, and nearly killed three men. Two of the men were removed in a dying condition to the Bradford Street Hospital. It was said one of them could not live through the night.

The injured were Emanuel Spiezio, 26 years old, of 252 Skillman Avenue, Williamsburg, owner of the fireworks plant; Antonio Lazettra, 21 years, of 176 Jackson Street, both of whom suffered from burns and wounds of the entire body, head and limbs; and Joseph Shapicio, 31 years old, of 252 Skillman Avenue, a brother-in-law of Spiezio, who sustained severe burns of the head, neck, and hands. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital.

The three men injured were working in the house used for a mixing room. This is a busy season, for the Fourth is not very far off, and the men were hurriedly getting ready for it. When the explosion came beams and torn woodwork, along with fragments of pots, used for mixing purposes, and tools were hurled into the air for hundreds of feet.

HOUSE ABLAZE, DIDN'T KNOW IT

Dr. Wilcox Was Reading in His Study When the Engines Came.

Dr. Reynold Webb Wilcox was seated in his study on the first floor of his home at 679 Madison Avenue last night when a servant entered and said:

"There must be a fire around here; the engines are outside."

"Is that so?" inquired Dr. Wilcox, and hearing the clanging of bells he went to the door and walked directly into the arms of Capt. Levy of Engine Company 39, in Sixty-seventh Street, who nearly knocked the doctor over.

"What do you want?" asked the physician.

"Nothing—only to put out a fire, if you've got one upstairs you don't want."

"Fire in my house?" said the doctor. "Pardon me, go right up, and for goodness sake put out all the fire you find."

On the fourth floor of the house the firemen found flames had burned out one of the rooms and had got into an adjoining one. A servant had left the gas burning, and a curtain had blown against it. The blaze was put out with little trouble.

"TELLTALE FLAT" SUIT.

Wife Sent News of Quarrels by "Wireless," Two Raps on Dumbwaiter.

It took the jury that has been hearing evidence in the suit brought by Robert E. Linnert, a jeweler, against his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Jochum, to recover $25,000 for alienating the affections of his wife, Margaret, only five minutes yesterday to decide in favor of the defendants. Mr. Linnert married his wife in 1903, when she was 18 years old. He asserted that they lived happily together until January, 1906, when through the interference of her parents she left him.

Mrs. Linnert testified yesterday that her parents had never advised her to leave Linnert, but that she would not live with him again because he made life "a hell for me."

A witness who lived in the same house as the Linnerts was asked whether he ever heard any noise coming from the Linnerts' apartment, and said:

"Well, you see, they were tell-tale flats, and you could hear a pin drop. I was sitting reading one night in 1906 when I got a wireless telephone. There were a couple of shakes of the dumbwaiter rope, followed by a couple of raps. We were used to those signals. It was Mrs. Linnert calling for her mother, who lived on the floor below. Then I heard Mrs. Linnert shout, 'Mamma, come upstairs and see what this fool has done.' Her mother answered back, 'What's that to me, Gretchen? You tend to your own troubles.'"

Mrs. Linnert is a teacher of music and singing, and is soloist at a Brooklyn church.

One Death Laid to Yesterday's Heat.

An unidentified man about 50 years old succumbed to the heat yesterday morning at Park Place and West Broadway. He was the first victim this season. Elmer Peterson, 19 years old, of 310 Ladingee Avenue, Braddock, Penn., was overcome at Pier 54, North River, and removed to St. Vincent's Hospital. William Putnam, a mail driver, was overcome in the Post Office.

FATAL TORNADOES IN THREE STATES

Louisiana Towns Said to be Wiped Out and Many Dead and Injured.

HEAVY LOSS IN NEBRASKA

Five Persons Are Killed There—Northern Texas Also Is Swept by a Destructive Storm.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 13.—The town of Gilliam, thirty miles north of Shreveport, was struck by a tornado to-day, and many persons are reported killed. A relief train has been sent to the village.

All houses except two are said to have been demolished. Gilliam is a village of about 100 inhabitants.

A report received here to-night states that three persons were killed and ten others were injured when a tornado damaged the Town of Bollinger, La., late today. Mrs. Marshall Davis and two negroes were killed, and the mother of Mrs. Davis was probably fatally injured.

Among the buildings damaged is the mill of S. H. Bollinger & Co.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 13.—The Postal Telegraph Company here has received a message saying that about half of the inhabitants of Gilliam either have been killed or injured, and urging that relief be sent at once.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 13.—According to information received in this city a tornado struck parts of Louisiana to-day, causing loss of life in Gilliam, Oil City, and Bollinger.

Telegraphic communication is interrupted, but reports say that the storm started north of Shreveport, swept along to Little Rock, Texarkana, and is central to-night in Texas.

It is reported that Gilliam, La., is wiped out, and that a number of lives have been lost. Oil City is also reported destroyed, with a loss of life and a number of persons injured.

DALLAS, Texas, May 13.—One person is known to have been killed, several others injured, and considerable property damage resulted from a tornado which swept through the northern section of this State yesterday. At Leonard, Texas, Mrs. A. T. Bowdry, lost her life, and her husband was injured when their home, a two-story structure, was demolished.

At Crandall about 50 houses were wrecked and several persons were injured. Among the buildings destroyed are the Christian Church and Shelton Hotel.

OMAHA, Neb., May 13.—At least five persons are dead, two fatally injured, and a score or more badly hurt, and a half million dollars' worth of property destroyed by a tornado which late yesterday afternoon passed over portions of Sarpy, Cass, and Nemaha Counties. The dead:

Mrs. Frank Hester, near Louisville; Charles Leader, near Richfield; Mrs. Marko, Bellevue; Martin Tieth and son James, near Papillion.

Fatally injured: Edward Martin, near Meadow; Mrs. Trucelle, Bellevue.

The heaviest property losses, so far as heard from, occurred at the United States Army Post at Fort Crook, and the Presbyterian College at Bellevue. The damage at that point will probably reach $150,000. The Bellevue Presbyterian Church, the oldest religious structure in Nebraska, was wrecked.

The storm followed both sides of the Missouri Valley southward from a point just below Omaha and towns and farmhouses in its path were scattered over a stretch of country twenty miles wide. Only two of the six railroads between Omaha and Chicago were in working order this morning.

BLINDED BY ACID FUMES.

Young Engineer in Harlem Hospital Says He Was Hurt in Standard Works.

Joseph Lyons, a young electrical engineer, whose home is in Baltimore, is in the Harlem Hospital nearly blind from the action of the fumes of hydrochloric acid to which he was exposed, according to his statements to the physicians, while working at the Standard Oil plant at Astoria, L. I.

Lyons came from Baltimore several months ago after finishing his course in electrical engineering, to hunt for a place in this city. He was unsuccessful and finally when his money was exhausted he was obliged, according to the story told the physicians, to go to work at the Standard Oil plant in Astoria.

There with other laborers his work brought him into the department where the hydrocholoric acid was used. In a few days his eyes began to give him serious trouble. He heard from his fellow-workmen that six men had gone blind from working in the place.

Yesterday morning, blinded by the fumes of the acid, he went to the Harlem Hospital. The doctors in the hospital called in a specialist, and he is said to have stated that with treatment Lyons might recover his eyesight in a few months.

HIGHER CRITICISM CRITICISED.

Episcopal Church Congress Discusses Addresses on the Subject.

DETROIT, Mich., May 13.—The constructive value of the "higher criticism" was the topic of discussion at the first session to-day of the Episcopal Church Congress, and the higher critics and their friends seemed to be in a majority in the congress. The addresses on the subject were made by the Rev. Loring W. Batten of New York, the Rev. E. M. Paddock of Allegheny, Penn.; the Rev. Lester Bradner of Providence, R. I., and the Rev. H. E. W. Fosbroke of Nashotah, Wis.

Mr. Batten pointed out that the term higher criticism, properly interpreted, means the search for truth by scientific methods, and has nothing to do with the results. The popular conception of the term, he said, confines it to the results.

Mr. Paddock discussed the authorship of books of the Old Testament, contending that they were probably written by several persons.

The Rev. Dr. William Maxson of Detroit, speaking from the floor, criticised the higher critics for being purely intellectual in their methods.

PASTOR GETS BIG LEGACY.

Mother Leaves $750,000 to Dr. Gregg, Whom Father Disinherited.

The Rev. Dr. David Gregg, who for thirteen years was pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, inherits nearly $750,000 under the will of his mother, who died two weeks ago at the home of her son, John R. Gregg, in Woodlawn Avenue in Pittsburg.

Dr. Gregg's father died some years ago, leaving his son David practically out of the will because the son had left the Church of the Covenanters, the branch of the Presbyterian Church which has several rather severe conditions, in accordance with the rules of the old Scottish faith. This was explained in the father's will.

By the will of Mrs. Gregg the estate, valued at $1,500,000, is to be divided as follows: Properties valued at $500,000 at 431 Wood Street, at 520 and 522 Wood Street, and a lot, 36 by 120, on Oliver Avenue, are bequeathed to Dr. Gregg. John R. Gregg receives property at 625 Smithfield Street and 508 Market Street, worth about $400,000.

To Mrs. Edna S. E. McKee, a daughter, is bequeathed property valued at $20,000 at 14 Stockton Avenue, Northside. Another daughter, Mrs. Mary E. McKee, is left a $20,000 property at 80 Lincoln Avenue, Northside. These properties are all in Pittsburg. The five children of John R. Gregg receive jointly a valuable property at Ohio and East Diamond Streets, Allegheny, and $5,000 each in cash.

Mrs. Gregg's two sons receive the residue, including many valuable stocks and mortgages, to be divided equally between them. John R. Gregg is named as executor.

The Rev. Dr. Gregg is at present stopping with his daughter Margaret at 372 Carlton Avenue, Brooklyn.

PARIS EAGER FOR CARUSO.

His Welcome There Next Month Will Lack Nothing in Enthusiasm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 13.—The indications are that Caruso will receive a greater welcome than he ever has had in his long career when he appears here June 11 in "Rigoletto" for the benefit of the Dramatic Authors' Fund.

Gabriel Astruc, discussing the arrangements for the benefit with THE NEW YORK TIMES's correspondent, said:

"Although I haven't made a single public announcement of the event, the advance booking already exceeds $12,000. The Messrs. Rothschild paid $1,000 for a box, and Baron Henri Rothschild and other prominent Parisians are paying $200 each for orchestra seats. The lowest-priced seat in the house will be sold at $20. Many well-known Americans are engaging places by cable. I expect the single evening will net about $40,000, an unprecedented sum for this side of the Atlantic."

Extraordinary interest attaches to the occasion, as this not only will be the first appearance of Caruso in Paris, but it also will be the first appearance of Melba for six years.

PUTS TAFT DELEGATES AT 582.

Hitchcock Says Secretary Will Have 91 More Than Required Majority.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—At the Taft headquarters this evening Mr. Hitchcock issued the following statement:

"Telegraphic advices received to-day from the party leaders in North Dakota, Montana, Oregon, Washington, and California indicate that the conventions occurring in those States to-morrow will instruct forty-six additional delegates for Taft.

"At the close of last week the number of delegates pledged to Taft was 452, of which 387 were instructed, 36 pledged by resolution of indorsement, and 29 pledged by personal declaration.

"The 70 delegates thus far elected this week, with the 46 to be chosen to-morrow by North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, and California will swell the total number of Taft delegates to 568. To this number should be added two delegates each from three districts in Ohio, two in Texas, one in Louisiana, and one in North Carolina that will hold their conventions before the close of the week, bringing the total number of Taft delegates up to 582.

"This means that Taft will have pledged to him in the convention not less than 91 delegates more than the required majority of 491."

TOOK CHILD FROM MOTHER.

Woman Who Called Herself Missionary Has Not Been Seen Since.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Little Marie Sheatz was taken from her home Tuesday morning by a woman who said she was a city missionary. Since then Marie has not been heard of. The police were notified this morning, and since then the whole city has been searched for the girl and woman without result.

The woman said her name was Mrs. McColgan. She told Mrs. Sheatz she was doing a little missionary work and would like to help her. Mrs. Sheatz's husband is out of work.

"I would like to adopt a child," said the woman, "and as you are having such a hard time to get along I will take Marie and my father will give your husband work on a railroad with which he is connected."

Mrs. Sheatz objected and then the woman said she would take the child downtown and buy her clothing.

SPIRIT NOTE FROM GORMAN.

Seeker After Buried Treasure Asserts Late Senator Says He Will Help.

Special to The New York Times.

FREDERICK, Md., May 13.—William H. Plummer has what he asserts is a message from the spirit of the late United States Senator Arthur Pue Gorman of Maryland. In it the late Senator promises to look for buried treasure in Carroll County, which Mr. Plummer and his brother, Nathan Plummer, who is disbursing Clerk of the Department of Justice in Washington, have been trying to locate for the past fifteen months. They learned of its existence through spirit messages.

The alleged message from Senator Gorman's spirit was received by Nathan Plummer. It was written across the face of a note addressed to Senator Gorman which was written by Nathan Plummer and taken in a sealed envelope to a spiritualistic séance in Washington.

SAY ABRUZZI MAY MARRY IN OCTOBER

Duke's Brothers and King of Italy Fully Approve of Engagement to Miss Elkins.

SHE MAY GO ABROAD SOON

Reported in Washington That It Has Been Decided Her Marriage Shall Take Place in Italy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 13.—It is stated here to-night on good authority that the wedding of the Duke of the Abruzzi and Miss Elkins will take place in October. There is no objection to the marriage on the part of the Duke's brothers, nor on the part of the King.

ROME, May 13.—The Duke of the Abruzzi arrived here this morning from Naples. He went at once to the Quirinal, and had a long conference with King Victor Emmanuel regarding his marriage to Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia.

It is announced that an agreement was reached on this subject with the Duke's brothers during a recent conference with them on board the battleship Regina Elena. The Duke had luncheon with the King and the Queen. Later he visited the Queen Mother and Princess Letitia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Gossip concerning the romance of Miss Katherine Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi was revived here this afternoon by the report that Miss Elkins would soon go abroad with her mother for an indefinite stay.

This soon was followed by another report to the effect that the wedding had been arranged and would take place in Italy in the Fall.

The report from Rome that the time for the wedding has at last been set causes no astonishment here among the friends of Miss Elkins. It has been generally known in social circles here that the young people were engaged, and that whatever objections might have existed in Italy, either had been or would soon be overcome. Close friends of Miss Elkins say they have known for several weeks that the wedding would take place this Fall, although they have not known in what month it was to be celebrated.

In spite of all the stories of obstacles in the way of the marriage, those here who know Miss Elkins and who met the Duke while he was in the capital have been firm in their belief that the marriage would take place some time in the near future. The Duke, they say, is not the sort of man who would let obstacles stand between him and the woman he loves.

LOOT FOUND, TWO MEN HELD.

Part of the Booty Identified by Victims from New Jersey Towns.

The Brooklyn police believe that they have under arrest two members of a gang of burglars who have been operating all over the country. They arrested the men at their homes in Brooklyn last night and found there $10,000 worth of jewelry, bric-à-brac, laces, and dresses, part of which have already been identified as the proceeds of burglaries.

William Maloney of 236 Adams Street and William O'Brien of 226 High Street are the prisoners. According to the police, their arrest was brought about by the confession of Harry W. Upson, the young Westerner who was caught in the home of David Remsen in Forty-ninth Street, between Linden Boulevard and Church Avenue, early last Monday morning.

Part of the stuff which the police say was found in the men's rooms was identified by Charles Seavers of Elizabeth, N. J., who was robbed on April 25; part by Mrs. Stilwell of 133 West Thirty-second Street, Bayonne, N. J., robbed on April 26; part by Thomas R. King of 730 Elm Avenue, Orange, N. J., robbed on April 27, and some more by relatives of Mrs. Jennie Hanky of 530 Elm Avenue, whose home was robbed recently after the woman had left for Hawaii.

BURGLARS PLAYED POKER.

Took Silverware Out of Sideboard, Then Sat Down to Quiet Game.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 13.—The gang of burglars which has been operating in this section for about a month evidently has a fondness for poker. Last night they paid a visit to the house of Mrs. W. E. C. Bradley of Smith's Ridge, New Canaan. After emptying Mrs. Bradley's sideboard of all its solid silverware the burglars sat down in the dining room for a quiet little game.

They must have left in a hurry, for a pack of cards and some poker chips as well as cigar stumps were found on the table. The burglars also entered the home of Prof. W. H. Burr of Columbia University and that of Mrs. Sturgis Coffin, another Summer resident of New Canaan. They got much solid silver in each house. The occupants and servants were asleep in the houses robbed and watchdogs were on guard.

TRAIN WRECKERS FOILED.

Freight Crew Find Obstruction in Time to Save Passenger Train.

Special to The New York Times.

CHESTER, Mass., May 13.—The second attempt in three days to wreck an east-bound New York Central passenger train was frustrated this morning by the crew of a west-bound local freight which discovered a post bolted to the east-bound track about a mile east of the Chester station. Had the freight train been a few minutes late the east-bound passenger train leaving Chester at 9:59 would have had a close call, as the steep down grade makes an abrupt stop impossible. An attempt to wreck a train at the same spot Monday night was also thwarted by the vigilance of a west-bound freight crew.

Railroad officials believe that both attemps were the work of tramps, with whom the road has been unusually severe of late.

TOUR TO GETTYSBURG. Pennsylvania Railroad, May 23, $12.75 round trip from New York. Consult Ticket Agents.—Adv.

MRS. LEAVITT AS ORATOR.

Bryan's Daughter to Take the Stump in Event He Is Nominated.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., May 13.—Mayor Jim Dahlman of Omaha, member of the Democratic National Committee and a personal friend of Bryan, returning to-day from Denver, where he has been with other members of the committee arranging for the National Convention, made the announcement that Ruth Bryan Leavitt will take the stump in those Western States which have woman's suffrage in the event that her father receives the Democratic nomination at Denver.

Mrs. Leavitt has inherited her father's speaking ability, and is expected to gain thousands of votes for him during the campaign. She will confine her efforts to her own sex.

PLOT TO KIDNAP BRYAN, JR.

Reported That Plan Was Formed to Lure Him to Texas Lake.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, May 13.—It is reported here that William Jennings Bryan, Jr., who is visiting in South Texas, was made the victim of an attempted kindapping on Galveston Bay about twenty-five miles south of Houston. It is said he was approached in Houston by a man who said he was a friend of the young man's father and invited on a hunting expedition at Clear Lake.

The seventeen-year-old boy accepted, when he received a tip that it was a plot to abduct and hold him for ransom. Detectives were employed, and instructed Bryan to enter into the scheme, and they would be on hand to arrest the abductors.

The story is told that at Seabrooke young Bryan found a launch waiting for him, and the man in charge had instructions to bring Bryan to the camp across the lake, but not to permit any one else on board. The officers obtained another boat and went to the camp, but found it deserted.

JUDGE O'SULLIVAN LOSES EYE.

An Abscess Formed After His Recovery from Pneumonia.

Judge Thomas C. O'Sullivan of General Sessions has been confined to his home, 340 West Fifty-eighth Street, for some weeks, recovering from an operation for the removal of one of his eyes.

A year ago the Judge suffered an attack of pneumonia. It left him with affected eyesight and finally an abscess formed back of one of his eyes. It was found necessary to remove it. This was done a short time ago and the Judge hopes to be able to attend court by the first of next month.

SENATOR FOELKER WORSE.

Unfavorable Symptoms Appear and Anxiety Is Again Felt.

POUGHKEEPSIE, May 13.—Anxiety is again felt for Senator Otto G. Foelker of Brooklyn, who is ill here following an operation for appendicitis. The condition of the patient at midnight was not satisfactory to those in attendance upon him. Dr. Murphy said hat the present symptoms were not at all favorable.

Senator Foelker passed a rather good day, and is said to have been relieved mentally at the receipt of the news that the supporters of Gov. Hughes in the latter's anti-race-track gambling campaign had been successful in the election in the Forty-seventh Senatorial District. Senator Foelker's detention at home has worried him and adversely affected him physically.

The Senator's nervousness became extreme to-night, when his temperature rose to 100½.

ATTACKED BY CIRCUS TIGER.

Trenton Boy Got Too Close to a Cage—Now in a Hospital.

TRENTON, May 13.—John Morrissey, 14 years old, went to the Barnum & Bailey Circus to-day, and, slipping under a rope, placed his face against the bars of one of the tiger cages. As he did so one of the tigers leaped from the other side of the cage, and buried its claws in the boy's right cheek.

Morrissey was taken to St. Francis Hospital, where his injuries were dressed. They consist of a ragged wound on the nose and eye, and two holes in the cheek.

ELKINS LAW RAISES VERDICT.

$34,818 Judgment Against Pennsylvania Railroad Increased Threefold.

HARRISBURG, Penn., May 13.—A jury in the Dauphin County Court to-day gave a verdict of $34,814.60 in favor of the Cox Coal Company of this city against the Pennsylvania Railroad as damages for violation of a contract in failing to build sidings in Cambria County. An appeal will be taken if a new trial is refused.

An interesting feature of the verdict is that under the Elkins law the plaintiffs are entitled to three times the amount of the finding, so that the sum due the Cox Company is $104,443.80. The suit was for $300,000.

SAYS HE HAS PARESIS GERM.

Young Alienist Reports Experimental Cases He Has Treated.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 13.—The germ of paresis has been discovered, asserts Dr. John D. O'Brien of the Ohio State Hospital at Massilon. He is the youngest alienist present at the Convention of the American Medico-Psychological Association, and read a paper on the subject to-day.

He says after inoculating animals with the paresis germ they acted as persons so afflicted. The members of what is known as the old school argued that there were no such germs. Many of the delegates, however, agreed with Dr. O'Brien.

WOULDN'T HAVE A DOCTOR.

Mrs. Morton Believed to the Last Faith Would Cure Her Blindness.

After clinging for eight years to the doctrines of Christian Science Mrs. Jane Morton, 69 years old, died on Saturday last at the home of her daughters at 792 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn. Mrs. Morton was stricken blind, and suffered from a mortal illness for some time before her death, but she finally believed that God would in some miraculous way restore her eyesight and heal her illness.

Dr. Frank H. Clark of 758 Putnam Avenue, a nephew of Mrs. Morton, repeatedly told her that her eyesight could be restored by a practically painless and easy operation, but she always answered him that Christ restored sight in the time He was on earth, and she finally believed that He could, by her faith in His power, restore her sight in these days. She would not allow any physicians to treat her.

JACK ATKIN WINS THE METROPOLITAN

Missouri-Bred Colt, with Top Weight Up, Captures Handicap in Fast Time.

RESTIGOUCHE RAN SECOND

Brilliant Race at Opening of Fashionable Belmont Park Meeting Witnessed by Crowd of 35,000.

In the fastest race, with the highest weight ever carried to victory in the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park, Jack Atkin, hero of a marvelous Winter and Spring campaign from New Orleans to New York, won the biggest open event of the Spring at the opening of the Belmont Park meeting yesterday. Out in front through the last seven furlongs of the mile contest Jack Atkin led past the winning post a length and a half before Restigouche and Don Creole, a neck apart, second and third, finishing the mile in 1:38 3-5, and amazing a vast crowd of spectators by the merit of his performance under his 128 pounds.

To the majority of the crowd in attendance it was regarded as among the impossibilities that the hard-campaigned colt could win at the weights and in such a field as the thirteen runners for the stakes made up, and Jack Atkin, at 8 to 1, started as one of the outsiders in the race, carrying the confidence of few aside from his stable connections.

The race was run under absolutely perfect conditions of weather and track, and the big event, combined with the opening of the first of the great race meetings of the metropolitan circuit, drew a patronage that equaled the best traditions of the fashionable Belmont Park course, the officials of the track estimating the attendance at 35,000.

The summerlike weather had a striking effect on the appearance of the crowd, and the spectacle presented became the gayest and brightest in the history of the track, when in the early part of the afternoon the women visitors discarded wraps and brought into view the glories of their Spring gowns and hats. There were enough women present, too, to make an impressive showing in all parts of the public stands, but the display was best in the boxes and in the clubhouse inclosure, where the two balconies were packed with women visitors, while others in groups spent the afternoon on the lawn, which was filled from end to end. The coming and going of the visitors from country houses of the vicinity was another spectacular part of the racing holiday, automobiles and carriages making a steady procession over the roads about the race course when the crowd was assembling, and the motorcars completely overflowing the huge parking space reserved for them beside the paddock.

The fashionable patronage marked the one important change in the aspect and management of the race-going crowd, the general conduct of the racing being in conformity with the regulations that were put into effect at the opening of the season at Aqueduct. In the betting ring the men who laid the odds transacted their business standing and without the use of betting paraphernalia other than the tablets used for recording bets, and the number of those who were permitted to transact business was held down to the same limitation that was in force at Aqueduct and Jamaica. This restriction caused even worse crowding and confusion among the visitors eager to bet than is usual on important racing days, but the managers of the track refused to remove any of the restrictions, and the crowd had to make the best of the chances that were offered.

The big betting event of the day, as a matter of course, was the race for the Metropolitan Handicap, and this produced singularly open speculation, though, as was stated by the layers, the volume of the betting was lighter than is common on the occasion of a popular turf event. All of the thirteen runners were backed, the last chance outsider, Old Honesty, even having a steady support that kept the odds against him down to a starting price of 40 to 1, where, on ordinary occasions for such a race, the outsiders surely would have gone to figures vastly greater. The general public and a majority of the horsemen backed McCarter, winner of the Excelsior Handicap at Jamaica, with such persistence that McCarter went to the post for the race a strong favorite at 2 to 1; the J. R. Keene entry, in which were included Superman, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap last season, and the fast three-year-old Restigouche, starting as the second choice at 4 to 1, with the three-year-old winner at Jamaica, King Cobalt, the next in favor. Jack Atkin, penalized eight pounds for his double victory in the Queens County Handicap and the Montague Stakes, after the publication of the weights for the Metropolitan, and carrying 128 pounds, or two pounds more than scale weight for a four-year-old, went back in the betting slightly and started as about equal choice with Brookdale Nymph, at 8 to 1.

The start of the race was made with the field in perfect alignment, and the thirteen horses made several strides before they began to tail out, McCarter, Superman, Jack Atkin, and King Cobalt being the first to show out of the crowd in the order named. Restogouche went up to the leaders with a rush in the first fifty yards, and the five horses in the first division were in close order, when just about the first furlong pole Jack Atkin went forward with a rush for the lead, and as he drew abreast of McCarter, Restigouche, and King Cobalt, swung over to the rail. There was a sharp jostle, in which it was impossible to determine which horse was at fault, though the jockeys in the race blamed Jack Atkin, the jostle knocking back three horses, of which McCarter fell back so rapidly that he was out of the contest in a few strides, Restigouche recovering quickest of the others, and then moving up into second place, while Jack Atkin took the lead, King Cobalt then running third. From the moment that he showed in the lead Jack Atkin drew out clear, and held his advantage of first place, Schilling, who rode him, taking him just wide enough on the turn into the stretch to find the best going, and then keeping him to his best efforts through the run home.

Jack Atkin had his field beaten a furlong from the end, and, coming on, won cleverly by a length and a half from Restigouche, which, after holding second place through most of the distance, lasted there just long enough to get second money by a neck from the 30-to-1 chance, Don Creole, which was last on the turn into the stetch, and closed with a fine final effort.

The value of the stakes was $12,720 gross, the winner's share being $9,620. Barney Schreiber, owner and breeder of Jack Atkin at the Woodlands Stud in Missouri, was not present to see his horse win, but his agent, for whom the horse is named, telegraphed him at San Francisco, without further specification, that "the best race horse in the world" had won the Metropolitan Handicap.

The race was the fourth important stake that Jack Atkin has won in New York this Spring, after racing all Winter at New Orleans, where he was the champion weight-carrying sprinter of the Winter racing. To save him the penalty incurred by winning the Montague States, his trainer, H. R. Brandt, wished to scratch the horse out of that race, but the owner wired orders for Brandt to go on and race the horse when he was ready, and not wait for any futures. Jockey Musgrave, who rode Jack Atkin in his earlier race, lost the chance to ride the winner by a change in his employer that seemed to give him every advantage in the race, as under his new agreement he rode the favorite, McCarter, thus giving another jockey, Schilling, the chance to ride and win on Jack Atkin.

SOCIETY IN BLACK AND WHITE.

That Is the Women Were—Men Wore Gay Colors—Not Lucky at Races.

The bright Spring weather and the lure of the season's first big race attracted thousands to the Belmont Park clubhouse and lawn. In the throng the men vied with the women in their display of odd color schemes and extraordinary hats. Considering the sunshine, there was a surprising number of sombre gowns. Black predominated.

If the women at Belmont Park may be accepted as standards for good taste in fashion, the "Merry Widow" hat has passed into oblivion. There were few millinery monstrosities to be seen. Although society was represented well, there were many notable absentees. One salient absence was the total lack of coaches; not a four-in-hand was driven to the course. The fashionable set traveled for the most part by automobile. After the last race the Long Island Ferry approach was blocked by almost a half mile of waiting cars.

Many of the clubhouse set had luncheons either at the Manice House or on the club verandas. At noon the spectators began to appear for luncheon before the races. The women arrived looking like apparitions, their faces swathed in from two to six veils. After a brief respite they would appear transformed.

Some of the Costumes.

In the race for the best-dressed woman the fashionable played black with black and white for second choice and gray for "show." There were few elaborate costumes. What was lacking in color effects was accomplished in wonderful fashions that suggested the Directoire and Empire periods. Mrs. F. Gray Griswold and Mrs. William Payne Thompson both wore black cloth gowns. Mrs. Griswold's was a reproduction of a Directoire dress. Mrs. Thompson's was made after the Empire mode. Both wore high-crowned, inconspicuous hats.

Mrs. Robert Goelet wore black and white marquisette with a ruff of gray and a Gainsborough hat trimmed with gray Paradise feathers. Somewhat similar was Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden's gown of black and white. Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., wore a striking black and white combination, with black predominating. A black gown with good effect was worn by Mrs. Emerson Buell, a guest of Gen. Brayton Ives.

A greenish gray costume was shown by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. With this gown she wore a single string of large pearls. Her hat was black, and suggested the shape usually worn by Nedda in "I Pagliacci." Mrs. Payne Whitney, in a pongee suit, with a hat laden with vari-colored flowers, looked like a schoolgirl. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., wore a plain coat and skirt in silver gray. Mrs. Thomas Hastings was dressed in black, as were Miss Nathalie Howland, Miss Maria de Acosta, and Mrs. Edward Hough.

Blue, Mauve, and Gray.

Miss Cornelia Fellowes wore a curious combination of turquois blue and mauve. The gown was in blue marquisette, and Miss Fellowes wore a great number of orchids and a mauve ruche. The gown of Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman was gray voile, and her hat was trimmed with gray feathers. Mrs. Van Rensselaer Kennedy was dressed in salmon pink, and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock had a gown of silver gray silk. Mrs. Austen Gray wore blue voile, and on her hat were massed blue hydrangeas.

A trio of young matrons consisted of Mrs. Albert Zabriskie Gray, Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., and Mrs. Harry T. Peters. Mrs. Peters and Mrs. Gray wore black suits, and Mrs. Gray's frock was touched lightly with gold threads. Mrs. Belmont wore her favorite gray, relieved by touches of sapphire blue. Mrs. Frederick Lewisohn was dressed in tan pongee.

It was possible to see some strange hat trimmings. One woman's hat was finished with dahlias made from vari-colored straw. Another had small peaches and "lady" apples studding a large blue hat.

Spinach Color for Men's Hats.

The men ran the gamut of styles from the straw hat and Summer clothes of Harry Payne Whitney to the conventional overcoat and derby of James R. Keene. The edict against the premature straw hat was revoked by many well-dressed men, and panamas and straws bloomed with freedom. There were numerous "spinach-colored" alpines, one green derby, several silver-gray derby golf caps, tan slouch hats, and several silk hats. Samuel Willets wore a panama with a suit of Glen Urquhart plaids. Jay Coogan had a wide-brimmed straw hat, and Searle Barclay clung to conventional striped clothes and a derby.

Perhaps there were more colors of the solar spectrum incorporated in the attire of Charles D. Wetmore than in that of any man on the lawn. He wore a gray suit, a blue shirt, a magenta silk tie, and yellow chamois gloves. Peter Goelet Gerry had an English walking coat in gray, a buff waistcoat, and a white Ascot tie. A glance at the men revealed that grays are the color for Summer and brown has been lain aside. There were several "high" blues from London and one olive-green suit.

Clubhouse Folk in Poor Luck.

As a rule the clubhouse contingent lost heavily on the day. In the Metropolitan the crowd vacillated between Mr. Whitney's Brookdale Nymph and King Cobalt, which was the most persistent tip. King Cobalt was number thirteen on the programme and there were thirteen horses in the race. Many, boasting of their lack of superstition, played the three-year-old with eagerness. The clubhouse crowd came to grief again when the Belmont pair was defeated in the fifth race.

These financial sorrows seemed to dampen the spirit of the fashionable folk. The women sent commissions quite unconcernedly and many a gold purse was depleted when the clubhouse "tips" went awry.

T. S. MARTIN TAKES STAKES.

P. J. Rainey's Jumper Easily Beats John M.P. for New York Steeplechase

For the patrons of cross-country sport the race for the New York Steeplechase Stakes, over the two-mile course, was an event that fairly rivaled the big stake handicap in the fact that it brought out for their first appearance this season the noted jumper T. S. Martin, now owned by Paul J. Rainey, and John M. P., the English 'chaser imported by Grant Hugh Brown, and now owned by J. E. Widener. Seven horses ran for the stakes, with John M. P. and the Rainey entry, which included two horses, St. Kevin starting with T. S. Martin as equal choices at post time.

Both horses were supposed to be at their best, and it was said of John M. P. that in his schooling through the Winter his impetuous way of racing at his jumps and his difficulty of restraint had been overcome. Accordingly John M. P. ran a waiting race yesterday, but ran disappointingly, as when placed he did not jump anything like as well as he did last season. T. S. Martin went to the front early, and making all the pace, won rather easily by two lengths from Kemp Ridgeley, while John M. P. was only a moderate third.

In all the remaining races only one post favorite was successful, that one being the two-year-old Fitz Herbert, carrying the colors of H. R. Brandt, trainer of Jack Atkin, in the second race. Fitz Herbert, at even money, made all the running and won easily by two lengths from J. E. Madden's pair, Joe Madden and Edward, which finished second and third.

Bonnie Alan cleverly won the maiden race, first on the card, by a length and a half, after Dial Plate led for six furlongs. In the six furlongs handicap down the straight J. E. Madden's colt, King James, one of the much-talked-of two-year-olds of last season, led throughout and won rather easily from Fair Play, which, coupled with Black Oak as the August Belmont entry, started as an odds-on favorite.

Blandy, well forward all the way, took the last race in handy style from the post choice, Bad News, while Monfort, which closed fast after running out on the turn, was third, and coming on so well that he might have won even then had his rider been able to keep him straight near the finish. LUCKY ACCIDENT FOR BETTORS.

Politicians Save Money by Farrell's Delay in Going to Belmont Park.

An automobile accident that delayed the arrival of Frank Farrell at Belmont Park until after the first race was run and Farrell's entry in the race, Almandine, beaten, proved a lucky turn for the politicians who were on hand for the opening of the Westchester Racing Association's meeting, Farrell himself being the only one of the group to lose on the horse.

The Farrell horses are trained in combination with those of "Big Tim" Sullivan, and, though the tip on Almandine was well distributed among politicians, the wise ones waited to get the word from Farrell himself on Almandine. Farrell had expressed his faith beforehand to his intimates, and when he did not get to the track in time for the race, James Gaffney, brother-in-law of Charles F. Murphy, obligingly placed the wager that Farrell had wished to make. The other politicians stayed off.

"Big Tim" Sullivan did not think much of Almandine anyhow, and said so. Among the politicians at the track were State Senators Christy D. Sullivan, P. H. McCarren, C. S. Burr, Sheriff Tom Foley, ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant, Joseph Cassidy of Queens, Gene Wood, and ex-Fire Commissioner F. J. Lantry. Most of them picked losers rather consistently, Tammany generally going for McCarter in the Metropolitan Handicap, though Gaffney selected Superman. The Tammany men were solaced when the last race was run, however, when Blandy, owned by Frank Farrell and backed from 6 to 1 down to 4 to 1, was the winner. About all the politicians at the track had bets on the horse.

FAMILY QUARREL MORTAL.

Wife Shoots Husband—He Fractured Her Skull with a Stove Lifter.

Following a family quarrel, in which both were thought to have received mortal wounds, Herman Koehler and his wife, Caroline, were put side by side in an ambulance and driven to the Flushing Hospital yesterday. At the hospital it was found that Mrs. Koehler was suffering from a fractured skull. Her husband had a bullet wound under the left shoulder blade, the bullet penetrating the left lung. The couple have three children and are prosperous. They kept a meat market at 88 West Shell Road, Corona.

Mrs. Koehler was handsome, and it is said that Koehler was jealous of her. Another report is that Koehler came home soon after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and as usual the couple began quarreling. The pair got into the street in front of their shop, where, it is alleged, Koehler struck his wife over the head with a stove lifter, which he had picked up in leaving the house.

Mrs. Koehler drew a revolver from her dress and fired at her husband, who turned to run at sight of the pistol. The bullet thus caught him just back of the left shoulder blade and he fell.

THE AWAKENING OF SPAIN.

American Consul at Barcelona Says It Is Entering World's Markets.

Consul General Benjamin H. Ridgley of Barcelona, Spain, who was recently made Consul General at Mexico City, arrived yesterday on the Antonio Lopez on his way to his new post. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter.

"There is no longer any antipathy toward Americans in Spain," he said. "Spain is awakening to her resources. Her manufacturers are entering the markets of the world. Already 10 per cent. of the cotton crop of this country is manufactured in Barcelona, and shipped from there to the ends of the earth."

Mr. Ridgley will leave for Washington this afternoon.

FATHER AIDS FULLERTON.

Says He Will Stand by ex-Cornell Student Accused of Abduction.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 13.—Samuel H. Fullerton, President of the Chicago Lumber and Coal Company, father of Robert W. Fullerton, who is under arrest at San Francisco under an indictment charging him with the abduction of Miss Gladys Hobart of Yonkers, N. Y., has instructed the attorney in San Francisco to go ahead with habeas corpus proceedings, providing it is established that he was arrested by an illegal procedure.

"All I know about the arrest," he said, "is what I have seen in newspaper dispatches and from meagre private dispatches from friends. I learned of my son's escapade with this young woman at the time it occurred in September, 1906. They did not go to South America, as reported, but did go to Jamaica. In the party were several other Cornell students and some other young women. My son returned to New York ten days later and the young woman came back about the same time, or shortly afterward.

"After Robert returned to St. Louis I learned that the young woman was demanding money from him, which I advised him not to pay. I will stand by my son and see him through this trouble."

BOY SAW WOMAN DROWN.

Called for Help, but When Man Got There She Was Dead.

A small negro boy walking along the shore of Gravesend Bay near the foot of Twenty-second Avenue at daybreak yesterday saw a woman floundering in the water about twelve yards from the beach. He yelled lustily for help. Charles Smart, watchman in the coal yards of Frederick Senken near by, heard the cries and ran to the shore. The negro lad pointed to where the woman was floating. She was quite still by this time. Smart waded in and dragged the body out.

The Coney Island Hospital was notified, and Dr. Meeker, the ambulance surgeon, tried for half an hour to resuscitate the woman. She was taken to the Bath Beach Police Station, where many persons called later in the day, trying to identify the woman. She was well dressed, and appeared to be about 25 years old, wore a Merry Widow hat of white straw, a blue cloth suit, white shirtwaist, and was about 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighed 135 pounds, and had brown hair and brown eyes. The police say the woman evidently committed suicide. They are looking for the negro lad who saw her struggling in the water.

CLINTON'S BODY IS MOVED.

Bones of First Governor of New York to be Reinterred at Kingston.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The body of George Clinton, first Governor of New York, now lies in the public receiving vault in the old Congressional Cemetery, in the ground of which it had rested for more than ninety-five years. The body was disinterred Monday. It will be taken to New York May 27 and reinterred May 30 at Kingston, N. Y., in the family plot, and only fifty feet distant from the spot where in June, 1777, Gov. Clinton stood to take the oath of office.

The monument that marked the grave here has been taken apart and will be raised in Kingston. It weighs nineteen tons, and was erected by the grandchildren of the Governor. In addition to having been the first Governor of New York, George Clinton was Vice President in the Administrations of both Jefferson and Madison.

Seeks to Annul His Marriage to Nurse.

TRENTON, May 13.—Dr. John Christian Bullitt, son of the late John C. Bullitt, who drafted the Bullitt bill, under which Philadelphia is now governed, filed a petition in the Court of Chancery here to-day seeking the annulment of his marriage to Josephine M. Zink. He recites that he was of unsound mind when he married. His petition sets forth that after being confined in a private hospital he came here on Dec. 27, 1899, and secretly married the nurse who had had charge of him and knew that he was mentally incompetent.

Cars Crash in Ninth Avenue.

A south-bound "dark" Ninth Avenue car, that was being pushed by another car filled with passengers, crashed into a Twenty-ninth Street cross-town horse car, swinging it around and shoving it up against an "L" pillar soon after 10 o'clock last night. The driver of the horse car, John Campbell, of 74 East 106th Street, was knocked senseless. The motorman of the rear Ninth Avenue car did not see the cross-town horse car in time to avoid the crash.

POLITICIANS UNLOAD TO AID MONTGOMERY

Sale of Philadelphia Rapid Transit Stock Is Attributed to Them.

LOOT REACHES $1,350,000

System Was to Put In Spurious Notes with Incorrect Signatures, Resembling Those of Well-Known Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Politicians are believed to have thrown their stocks on the market to-day to cover up political loans in the Alleghany National Bank at Pittsburg, whose cashier, William Montgomery, is now under arrest, charged with stealing $1,350,000.

The heaviest selling of Rapid Transit stock for many months occurred to-day, and the rumor was current that the stock was that of leading politicians who have been forced to get together large sums to help out Cashier Montgomery, who for years was Quay's banker. It is known that large notes were in the bank inherited by the State organization from the régime of Quay.

Brokers who dealt in the largest sales to-day are accustomed to transact the business of the political leaders, and that gave credence to the rumor on the Street that the politicians were rushing to cover up loans not only in the Allegheny National Bank, but in other institutions having State money on deposit.

Within an hour to-day 5,500 shares of Rapid Transit stock were sold. This forced the market to decline 1½ points, the stock falling from 18 to 16½ on these heavy and unexplained transactions.

Other local stocks did not decline in sympathy with the Rapid Transit slump.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 13.—Additional defalcations by William Montgomery, ex-Cashier of the Allegheny National Bank, amounting to $100,000, were discovered to-day by Bank Examiner William L. Folds, making the total amount of his known shortage $1,350,000.

It is thought that it will not go much higher than this. Montgomery, under guard of his friends, although he is out on bail, was taken to the office of his attorney this afternoon, where he was subjected to another examination. He made a lengthy statement, in which, it is alleged, he implicated several other persons. It is probable that additional arrests will be made in a few days.

The system that Montgomery used to rob the bank was also disclosed to-day. Most of the money he took from the bank was in exchange for spurious notes which bore a signature greatly resembling the signature of some prominent business man, except that the name would be misspelled or the middle initial changed. Montgomery practiced this system for a long time, but finally dropped it, evidently fearing detection, and did not hesitate at forgery.

Two years ago an inventory was made of Montgomery's holdings, and it was found that he was worth $1,000,000. Most of it was in Tonopah Extension, Brisbee, Tramps Consolidated, and Shoshone stocks. More of Montgomery's Tonopah Extension stock, which he turned over to the bank, was dumped on the market to-day, causing the price of the stock to break from 85 to 82.

Fearing a run after yesterday's developments, the Allegheny National piled money high in the banking house to-day. Only a few accounts, it was announced, were withdrawn. The announcement was made this afternoon by the Pittsburg Clearing House that the Marine National Bank, which has for many years cleared through the Allegheny National, will, commencing to-morrow, clear through the Union National.

FUN FOR FLEET OFFICERS.

They Witness Annual Spring "Jinks" at Bohemian Club, San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—Practically every off-duty officer from the combined fleets attended to-night the annual Spring "Jinks" of the Bohemian Club, which is famed for its clever entertainments. It was one of the few functions that the officers have attended voluntarily, their presence at teas, parties, balls, &c., being the result of official details.

The privileges of the club have been extended to all officers, and to-night the "Jinks" depicted the days of '49. The scenes and incidents of the evening were intended to recall California's golden age of romance. The setting of the "Jinks" was a huge tent just where the Leavenworth Trail hits the old Post Highway. The tent was fitted out as the Red Dog Music Hall.

The Greek colony of San Francisco has presented Admiral Thomas a beautiful silver urn in token of their appreciation of American citizenship and the achievements of the battleship fleet. The urn, which is fully eighteen inches in height, bears on its face two Greek coins that were current in Athens when the battle of Salamis was fought, 2,388 years ago.

Admiral Thomas, in receiving the urn, said that it would remain in the Admiral's cabin of the Connecticut as long as the ship should float.

CHICAGO, May 13.—"I hated to leave the old gang," said Admiral Evans today, speaking of his separation from the fleet. "It was the hardest blow I ever had," he went on to say. "But there are two things I don't worry about—things that I cannot help and things that I can."

When asked concerning his health, the Admiral replied that he was feeling "all wool and a yard wide." The Admiral and his party left for the East after a three hours' stay in the city.

LONDON, May 13.—Addressing a trade conference in London to-night, John Henniker Heaton, M. P., in advocating a penny telegraphic rate between Great Britain and the Continent of Europe, said it was a matter of common knowledge that penny postage with the United States would be adopted soon.

$35,000 FOR VICTIM OF NIGHT RIDERS

Robert Hollowell, Who Was Forced to Leave State, Wins Damage Suit.

CASE IN FEDERAL COURT

Armed Band Whipped Him in Presence of Wife and Son, Who Have Similar Suits Pending.

Special to The New York Times.

PADUCAH, Ky., May 13.—The first blow to be struck against the night riders in Kentucky, which many think will put a stop to continued depredations, was the awarding by a jury in the Federal Court at Paducah to-day of a verdict for $35,000 to Robert Hollowell, who had sued his brother, John E. Hollowell, and twenty-seven others for $50,000 damages for driving him from the State.

Judge Walter Evans of the Federal Court for the Western District of Kentucky held a special term of court to try the suits, and the jury was obtained from a panel drawn in Jefferson and Bullitt Counties, in another section of the State. The jury was out but thirty-five minutes, and the only question to be decided by it, according to jurymen, was the amount of damages to be awarded, some wanting to give the full amount.

The case arose from the whipping of Hollowell on the night of May 1, 1907. Hollowell's wife also has a suit for $50,000 pending, and their son, Price Hollowell, has a suit for $25,000. The defense gave notice of a motion for a new trial, which, if denied, it is said, will be carried to the Court of Appeals and eventually to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Hollowell was a tobacco grower of Lamasco, and on the night of May 1 a band of armed men descended upon his place, shot up the premises, and, after tying him to a tree, lashed him in the presence of his wife and little son. The suits were instituted on March 2, 1908, and at the first trial in April, 1908, there was a disagreement.

Hollowell had been a non-association grower and had refused to join the league.

It is believed the moral effect of the decision will be a severe check to whippings and barn burnings in future. Many others have been forced to leave the State, as was Hollowell. One of the causes for award of damages was the fact that Hollowell had to sell his valuable farm at a big sacrifice when he left the State. A detachment of militia was present at Paducah during the trial.

MAY SELL TRACT BUILDING.

President Recommends It If Cash Can't Be Got to Lift Mortgage.

At the eighty-third annual meeting of the American Tract Society held yesterday in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, President Roosevelt, Justice David J. Brewer, and ex-Gov. W. J. Northen of Atlanta, Ga., were re-elected honorary Vice Presidents. The new Vice Presidents elected were Henry E. Cobb, New York; the Rev. James L. Barton, Boston; the Rev. J. M. Buckley, New York; Charles H. Rutan, New York; the Rev. C. A. Miller, Brookline, Mass.

President William Phillips Hall, Vice President Robert S. MacArthur, and Secretary the Rev. Henry Lewis were also re-elected. President Hall in his address said that if the large mortgage indebtedness that has rested on the society's building at 150 Nassau Street cannot be provided for by large gifts in the near future, it will be for the best interests of the society to dispose of its building and purchase some modest property elsewhere.

CITY BREVITIES.

Commissioner Bingham transferred forty policemen to Coney Island yesterday for the season.

Owing to an engagement of Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, motions down for hearing before him in Special Term, Part I., to-day will not be heard until 2:30 P. M.

There will be a concert of original compositions by pupils of the Department of Music of Columbia University this afternoon in the auditorium of Earl Hall. Mrs. Raymond Osborn, soprano, and George Featherstone, baritone, will be two of the soloists.

The second annual meeting of the National Association of Employing Lithographers opened at the Hotel Astor yesterday and will continue to-day, closing with a dinner to-night.

For a second time trial of the action brought by Lawyer William Harmon Black against Daniel J. Sully to recover $3,500 for legal services was postponed yesterday. Edward M. Grout, counsel for Mr. Black, objected, but Supreme Court Justice Dowling set May 20 for the trial.

The Trustees of the New York Public Library held their first meeting in the new building at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon. A Dupressis portrait of Benjamin Franklin, painted in 1783, was presented to the board by Mr. Bigelow.

The ten-cent fare to Coney Island was the subject of further argument yesterday before Commissioner McCarroll of the Public Service Commission. Ex-Judge Edward Hatch, on behalf of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, argued that a five-cent fare would be confiscatory, and that no justification had been shown for the complaint.

PADEREWSKI to The WEBER PIANO CO.

New York, May the 4th, 1908.

To the WEBER PIANO COMPANY:

Gentlemen—It seems to me superfluous to give you in writing my appreciation of your instruments. Practically you do not need it. I have been playing the Weber for seven months in this country and this fact alone proves more than anything which could be said or written. Whatever "disinterested" detractors may object to, had I not found in your pianos a perfect medium for my art I would have never played them in public.

But you insist upon having my opinion. So let me say this:

For the first time I do not feel tired of piano-playing after a long concert tour. I gave during the season ninety-three performances and my fingers are not sore, my arms are not aching, my nerves and muscles are as strong and fresh as on the day of my arrival. This is entirely due to the supreme qualities of your instruments: positive perfection of mechanism, exceptionally easy production of tone, its beautiful singing quality, and, in spite of it, its marvellous clearness.

There is an unquestionably great progress in piano-playing among the American public; there must be a progress in piano-making. You have realized it. The public will not fail to recognize your merit.

Most sincerely yours, I. J. PADEREWSKI.

ANOTHER ARREST IN NOTE SWINDLE CASE

Henry Hosier, a 33d St. "Broker," Locked Up as One of the Operators.

$1,000,000 FIRM WRECKED

Deal for $1,500,000 in the Paper of a Philadelphia Publishing House Wrecked It.

Henry Hosier, who says he is a member of the firm of Henry J. Rodman & Co., brokers at 1 West Thirty-third Street, but, according to the police, an ex-convict and an uncle of "Big Bill" Henig, who was shot in Broadway a year ago by Thomas O'Connor, now doing time in Sing Sing for swindling through the mails, was arrested last night at his home, 200 West 105th Street, and locked up at Police Headquarters as a hitherto unsuspected member of the gang of swindlers whose operations are being investigated by the District Attorney's office, and four of whom are now under arrest or serving sentences. The specific charge against Hosier is the grand larceny of $10,000 worth of notes.

This charge was made by Conrad Schweikert of 24 Bay Street, Tompkinsville, S. I., a butcher and grocer, and it was he who brought about Hosier's arrest. He was victimized by Hosier in October, 1905, he charges, and after a few months had given up all hope of ever recovering his money or having Hosier arrested. When he read the newspaper accounts of the gang of note swindlers Schweikert went to the District Attorney's office and was referred by Assistant District Attorney Kindleberger to Central Office Detective McConville.

McConville said he recalled Hosier as a friend and associate of Charles Augustus Seton and "Col." Colmey, both of whom are now serving sentences in connection with the famous Norfolk & Western stock swindle, and last night he located Hosier's flat. He got his man by calling him to the telephone by a decoy message.

McConville said he knew that Hosier had worked with Shippey and Gundlach, two men who have already been arrested in connection with the note-swindling gang's exposure, and was sure he was a member of the gang. He said that Hosier had been sent to Sing Sing for three years on Nov. 30, 1894, for a note swindle.

A Philadelphia Swindle.

A deal in which the Gebbie Publishing Company of Philadelphia, a concern rated as worth $1,000,000 in the commercial agencies, was wrecked has been uncovered in the investigation of the swindle by the District Attorney's office.

Through a confession of "Major" Whelpley, already in custody, details were obtained which may lead to two or more important arrests of "men higher up" in the system within the next few days. The Gebbie deal in 1906 forms an important link in the chain of evidence in the case.

It was engineered so far as the Philadelphia end was concerned by a man named Trautwin, whose name has appeared in the accounts of many of the deals under investigation by Assistant District Attorney Kindleberger and Detectives McConville and Nelson of the Central Office. According to Whelpley's confession Trautwin arranged with the Gebbie Company to discount $1,500,000 of notes and then divided them up between various accomplices here to be disposed of.

Joseph Hart, a lawyer who has offered to give such help to the District Attorney's office as he can in connection with the note swindles, corroborated Whelpley's statements of the Gebbie deal, and from the combined stories of Hart and Whelpley it developed that Gardiner, the fugitive from justice, and Gundlach, now in the Tombs on several charges of larceny, helped to dispose of the Gebbie notes, while certain of them came eventually into the hands of George N. Morton, a promotor who makes his headquarters in the Astor House, and Michael Jacobs, a lawyer whose name figures in certain other note transactions which are the basis of charges against Gundlach and other members of the gang.

Janitor a Note Broker.

Morton went to Mr. Kindleberger's office yesterday afternoon and had a long talk. Jacobs also talked to Mr. Kindleberger, and there was a session with Robert Connell, the nego janitor of 72 Trinity Place, who was considerable of a note broker himself in his own way, and is expected to prove a valuable witness for the State.

Yesterday it turned out that Charles Barry, or Bary, who was in negotiation with the American and British Manufacturing Company of 74 Broadway to float $250,000 in notes at the time of his arrest, had offered the whole lot to Connell to place for discount, and was to allow Connell 1 per cent. on the face value of the notes he could discount in this way.

The American and British Company, Mr. Kindleberger discovered, is one of Joseph Hoadley's concerns, and has its offices with the International Power Company. Its Secretary, who conducted the correspondence found in Barry's pockets after his arrest, is also Assistant Secretary and a Director of the International Power Company.

New Light on Barry.

More and more information is coming to light about Barry. He appears to have been known as Charles Bary to his family, who live in Chicago, and has only spelled his name Barry in his more recent dealing with the world of finance in New York. Of Russian-Italian origin, he is an accomplished linguist and probably correct in his statement as to his early education and graduation from several Western institutions.

But there is increasing doubt in Mr. Kindleberger's mind as to the correctness of Barry's views on the subject of his West Virginia land holdings. "Major" Whelpley told Mr. Kindleberger that he (Whelpley) also had deeds to the 91,000 acres of valuable land in West Virginia which Barry has insisted constituted the basis of his fortune of $1,000,000 and more. Nor was this all. Whelpley says that there are several other sets of deeds in existence, including one on which the notorious "Doc" Langley used to depend in organizing his names for separating the public from its money. The Langley "deeds" referred to land in Greenbrier County, West Va. Whelpley says now that the land on which the various deeds have been issued is really in dispute between the Drexel estate of Philadelphia and a wealthy mine owner of that city, Howard Sipher, and that at about the time of his bankruptcy proceedings here in 1903 Barry transferred the title to his "land" for $25,000.

The Lester Mills Note Deal.

From Whelpley also an account was obtained by Mr. Kindleberger of the Lester Mills note transaction. The story had it that several years ago Barry, who was then occupying offices at 74 Broadway and living in style, negotiated for an option on the Lester Mills of Lester, Ohio. Having obtained this, Barry, although it was never made effective, is said to have issued against it $500,000 notes signed by himself as President and by one Charles W. Phillips as Secretary of the Lester Mills.

These notes were hawked around the country and some of them were sent up to Boston to be disposed of by Edward J. Dunning, a lawyer, who did some note brokerage business, and is now about to emerge from the Charlestown State Prison after having done time in connection with some of his deals.

Mr. Kindleberger got some interesting information in connection with this matter from Joseph D. Harlock, a lawyer, who was retained by Barry to go to Boston and see if he could rescue some of the Lester Mills notes from Dunning. Harlock did not at that time know the true character of the notes and he went to Boston, only to have one of the notes for $2,500 tendered to him on his return for payment for his services. He was a petitioner against Barry in the bankruptcy proceedings here in 1903.

Barry is to be examined to-day before Peter B. Olney as referee in the bankruptcy proceedings instituted by Rudolph A. Breitenbach against George C. Carpenter, who, in connection with Maurice C. Dreshfield, got $182,000 of diamonds from Breitenbach, giving in payment notes which turned out unsatisfactorily.

That Barry was mixed up in the transaction became known to Receiver William Lesser on April 3, when Dreschfield broke away from Carpenter and testified to the deal planned in his office, 170 Broadway, in August last. He said he answered an advertisement headed "Notes Discounted," and a day or so afterward Barry called on him.

Barry explained that he represented a man desirous of putting up bonds, stock, and notes of well rated men who wished to buy diamonds and raise money on the jewels. Dreschfield said he entertained the proposition, and in the course of the deal Barry introduced him to O. S. Ticer, an employe in the office of the Monarch Fire Appliance Company, 17 East Thirty-second Street, and later on Carpenter was brought forward as the investor. Dreschfield said he was informed that Carpenter was President of the Monarch Company, a concern represented to be worth $300,000, who in addition to putting up stock of his company was prepared to invest stock of the Norwalk Steel & Iron Company of Norwalk, Ohio, to the amount of $35,000.

BLACK HANDER CONVICTED.

Di Marco Was Caught Taking Money Called For in Threatening Letter.

Camelo di Marco, a saloon keeper who lives at 328 East 107th Street, was convicted yesterday of blackmail before Judge Crain in General Sessions, largely on the evidence of a letter written to Caterina Pollicino of 519 East Thirteenth Street, which demanded $200, and was signed M. N., which stands for the Italian words Mano Nera, (Black Hand.)

The letter was addressed to Michael Pollicino, Caterina's son. It said:

> Dear Madame: We use few words, but we make you understand that if you go to the authorities you will pay with blood; if you fail to keep the appointment the bomb will settle all.
>
> Send $200 to 125th Street and First Avenue, at the corner of the bridge, on Saturday, April 8, at 4 P. M. One of us will have a newspaper in his hand; the person you send must carry a handkerchief in his. Beware! If none come you are lost, for you cannot escape the vengeance of our daggers.

Michael notified the police, wrapped two bills in a package, went to the bridge, and saw Di Marco with a newspaper in his hand. For some reason or other the detectives were not there, as they had agreed to be.

Nevertheless, Michael handed over the package; the man moved away. Michael then drew a revolver and fired. At the first shot the man dropped the package and began to run; the next struck him on the hand and he fell to the ground and was arrested by Policeman Henry Hauser.

He will be sentenced Friday.

Black Hand Letter Hastened Death.

Edward F. Grace, Town Treasurer of Harrison, N. J., who died a few days ago, received a post card of the "Black Hand" species on Feb. 29 warning him to resign his office within two months or fear the worst. Red ink had been used by the writer, who inscribed the usual revolver and skull and crossbones on the card. His friends say it worried him greatly, and that it hastened his death.

CAPT. McDERMOTT ON TRIAL.

You've Got to Get Out and Find Things for Yourself, Says Bingham.

"You would do much better," said Commissioner Bingham to Capt. Stephen McDermott, after hearing the evidence on the charge of neglect of duty against the Captain yesterday at Police Headquarters, "to come here without a lawyer; not that I want to discourage you from employing counsel."

Ex-Attorney General Julius Mayer, counsel for Capt. McDermott, rose hastily to explain his presence.

"As one of the Justices of Special Sessions," he said, "I had an opportunity to see the good work of my client in cleaning out the Red Light District—the Fifth Street Station Precinct. In fact, I was influential in securing from Commissioner Greene the Captain's promotion."

The charges against Capt. McDermott were based on a raid made by the Commissioner's men on an alleged poolroom at Twenty-second Street and Third Avenue. Capt. McDermott said he was the only Captain who had not either been dismissed or heavily fined while in charge of the Fifth Street Precinct.

He added that his appointment as Captain had come to him from Gen. Greene on the personal indorsement of President Roosevelt, who told Gen. Greene he wished he would send some good man down into the Fifth Street Precinct to clean out the Red Light District. He thought McDermott was about the right man for the work.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing," said Commissioner Bingham after the evidence was all in, "it won't do for police Captains to sit at their desks and expect people to come to them and tell them there is gambling going on around the corner. You've got to get out and find out these things for yourself."

Decision was reserved.

WANTS A $10,000 SALARY.

Dock Commissioner Requests This Sum and an Assistant for His Chief Engineer.

Dock Commissioner Allen N. Spooner wishes to raise the salary of his Chief Engineer, Charles W. Stanniford, from $6,000 to $10,000, and to create a Deputy Chief Engineer of his department, a new place, at a salary of $6,000.

In a letter to the Board of Estimate the Commissioner points out that the father of the Mayor, Gen. George B. McClellan, was appointed in 1870 Engineer in Chief at $10,000, and that this was increased six months later to $20,000. However, two years later it was, at the General's own request, reduced to $10,000.

Since Gen. McClellan resigned $5,500 and $6,000 have been paid to the Chief Engineer of the Dock Department, although Chief Engineers of other departments receive from $10,000 to $16,000.

The Board of Estimate has recommended the Board of Aldermen to grant the Commissioner's request.

CLUE TO ACCOMPLICE OF MRS. GUNNESS

Fred Hafle Says a Stranger Asked Him to Woo a Wealthy Widow of Laporte.

GAVE HIM HER PHOTOGRAPH

Picture Is a Good Likeness of Mrs. Gunness—Conducted Matrimonial Business Under Three Names.

LAPORTE, Ind., May 13.—What is considered the first conclusive evidence that Mrs. Gunness had an accomplice in the murders at her farm near here came to light to-day through a letter received by Chief of Police Cochrane from Fred Mafle of 1,564 Lakewood Avenue, Lake-Hafle of 1,564 Lakewood Avenue, Lake-

Hafle stated in his letter that he was approached last July by a stranger, who desired that he meet and woo a wealthy widow who had "a ranch near Laporte, Ind." As stated in the letter, Hafle, who is a retired mechanic, met the stranger in the public square casually. They struck up a conversation, and in the course of time the stranger mentioned the wealthy widow who was looking for a husband.

Hafle said the stranger was a German and that they conversed in German.

"The man did not give me his name," Hafle said, "nor the name of the woman. I had forgotten the name of the town in Indiana until reminded by the dispatches from Laporte telling of the Gunness woman. The stranger took my name and address and said he would write. After talking with him a while we went to a hotel, where he was stopping. There he got his suitcase and coat and left, after asking me to meet him at the hotel the next morning at 9 o'clock. I went to the hotel the next morning, but saw nothing of him. I never saw or heard of him afterward."

Photograph Resembles Mrs. Gunness

Hafle inclosed a photograph, which he said, had been given to him by the stranger. The photograph is a good likeness of Mrs. Gunness, and it is probable that Hafle will be asked to give further particulars of his experience. He says he thinks he can identify the man who wanted him to go to Laporte.

Sheriff Smutzer says that several more globules of gold were panned out to-day by Louis Schulz, the miner who is sluicing the ashes on the Gunness farm. The Sheriff is certain that the discoveries are portions of gold filling from the teeth of Mrs. Gunness.

Officials of the three Laporte banks held a conference to-day to determine the most effective way in aiding the authorities in untangling the murder mysteries. It was decided that the First National Bank of Laporte, the Citizens' Savings, and the State Bank of Indiana should furnish a list of all transactions in which Mrs. Gunness paid out, deposited, or received money. With a complete list of this kind Prosecutor Smith expects he will be able to secure valuable information.

Prosecutor Smith said to-day that the silver watch taken from Lamphere when he was arrested has been declared by Asle Helgelein to resemble the one which his brother Andrew owned. Lamphere's watch was a present to him from Mrs. Gunness.

Used Three Different Names.

J. H. Turner, mail carrier, on whose route the Gunness farm is situated, said to-day that Mrs. Gunness carried on her matrimonial business under three different names. He declared that he had delivered scores of letters to Mrs. Gunness under the names of "Mrs. Belle Sorenson," "Mrs. Belle Gunness," and "Mrs. Jennie Hinkley."

Mrs. Gunness's hired man, Ray Lamphere, vigorously denied to-day that he had made any confession or promised any to the Rev. E. A. Schell or to any one else. Lamphere is under arrest here charged with complicity in the wholesale murders at the Gunness farm.

New Yorker May Be Gunness Victim.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWICH, N. Y., May 13.—Relatives of James Kane of Tunnel, Chenango County, now believe that he was one of the victims of Widow Gunness at Laporte, Ind. Kane, who was a farmer, left his home several months ago, after announcing his intention of going West and marrying a widow. He was traced to Chicago. Since his departure his father has died, leaving him heir to a considerable estate.

WANTS TRANSFERS ABOLISHED

Suit Started to End One Fare on Westchester Electric and Union Railway.

A move for the abolition of transfers between the Westchester Electric Railway system and the Union Railway Company is under way. Receiver Young was served yesterday with the preliminary notice, and the matter will come before Justice Lacombe in the Southern District United States Court to-morrow at 3:30 o'clock.

The motion is made by the Lorrain Steel Company, one of the road's creditors. The move will be opposed by the receiver and by the City of Mount Vernon and other municipalities in which the lines operate.

If the transfers are abolished by the court it will cost 10 cents to get from Mount Vernon to the Subway at West Farms or the elevated at Bedford Park. The fare to Bronxville from New York will become 15 cents, and from New York to White Plains 20 cents, and from New York to New Rochelle either 10 or 15 cents.

Banker Pati Put in Bankruptcy.

Pasquale Pati & Son, bankers of 238 Elizabeth Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on March 25th, were adjudicated bankrupts yesterday by Judge Hough, and the case was referred to Macgrane Coxe, referee in bankruptcy, to take further proceedings.

HANNA LOSES MORSE CHECK.

One Banker Indorsed in O'Brien's Name Is Invalid, Court Rules.

Judge Lacombe of the United States Circuit Court handed down a decision yesterday in the suit brought by Albert B. Boardman of the law firm of O'Brien, Boardman & Platt against Charles A. Hanna, receiver of the National Bank of North America, to recover $100,000 on a check made by the Mercantile National Bank and payable to ex-Justice Morgan J. O'Brien or his firm, but indorsed by Charles W. Morse.

Mr. Morse obtained the check by discounting a note given by Mr. O'Brien to Mr. Morse in payment of shares of a stock, which note, according to Mr. O'Brien's contention, was not to have been discounted. It was out of the signing of the check with Mr. O'Brien's name that Mr. Morse was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury.

In his decision Judge Lacombe says that despite the agreement between Morse and O'Brien, the note would be a valid obligation against the latter if the Mercantile National Bank showed that it was a bona fide holder for a valuable consideration, but that inasmuch as it had "never paid the check to O'Brien or his order, it must fail to recover on the note; and would be a loser to the amount of $100,000 which it had paid on the check to persons who did not represent O'Brien and whom he had never authorized to collect the same.

"That loss had resulted, however, because the Mercantile National Bank relied upon the guaranty of prior indorsements signed by the National Bank of North America, to which it had paid the money; and against this latter bank it had a good cause of action. This cause of action it assigned to the plaintiff on Nov. 15, 1907, and the latter, upon the testimony here taken, is entitled to judgment thereon against this defendant."

JAILER IS OUT.

And the Sheriff Is In—First Stage in the Fight for a Fine Cottage.

Thomas Banning, who has been holding the jailer's cottage at the Richmond County jail for months in face of Sheriff Joseph Barth, moved out yesterday, but he said it would be temporary.

The Sheriff will move in immediately. He packed up last January to move from Stapleton over to the town of Richmond. It was then that he found that Jailer Banning liked the fine new cottage, and would not get out on request.

Banning has been connected with the Richmond County Sheriff's office for twelve years. Part of the time he has been Under Sheriff. He always occupied the jail cottage.

The Sheriff made charges of insubordination against Banning, had copies of the charges served on him, and tried him, making the complaint himself. He then judged that Banning was guilty, ordering his removal. Yesterday a Deputy Sheriff and a City Marshal removed Banning from the fine new cottage. Banning will appeal.

Jury Values an Eye at $2,500.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Ford awarded yesterday $2,500 to Henry Vogel of 257 West 124th Street, against the New York City Railway Company, for the loss of an eye in a collision between a Twenty-eighth Street horse car and a truck owned by Charles I. Rosenblum. Vogel, who is nearly 70 years old, was struck in the eye by a piece of flying glass. Louis Steckler was counsel for Vogel.

ENDURANCE RACE MAY MAKE RECORD

Transcontinental Figures Established Four Years Ago Ought to be Bettered.

FORMER TRIPS AND RECORDS

Trials Made with Relays of Drivers Not Considered So Good as the Old Franklin Mark—Routes Have Varied.

The possibility of a real record trip across the United States being made in a double transcontinental endurance race is considered excellent. There has been a big improvement in automobiles since the early attempts to cross the continent, and the latter attempts have been made under conditions that forbid their acceptance without an explanation of the circumstances attending them. Even then there has never been a trial under close surveillance from start to finish. It is this close surveillance that gives the proposed test its true value.

Since Dr. Jackson made his first trip across the country five years ago there have been many advances in automobile construction. Dr. Jackson in his little two-cylinder Winton made the trip in sixty-three days. He went north from San Francisco into Oregon and Idaho, and then south to the Mormon trail in Wyoming, following it across Nebraska, and then proceeding over the path that has since become beaten east of Omaha, along the Lakes and down the Hudson on the final stage. E. T. Patch, in a 12-horse power Packard, lowered that record two days about a month later in the same year. He went direct along the line of the Central Pacific to Ogden, and then south through Utah and Colorado and north again to the Union Pacific line in Nebraska. He covered the same trail as Dr. Jackson and his followers east of the Missouri River. Still a month later Whitman made his first trip in an 8-horse power Oldsmobile, following the Overland Limited's trail all the way to the Missouri. Whitman, however, failed by twelve days of equaling the Patch record.

On his second trip in a 10 horse power Franklin, Whitman established a record of 32 days 23 hours and 20 minutes, which is to-day regarded as the best performance that has been made across the country. This, too, followed the overland route. It has been excelled in actual time only twice, and each time by machines driven by relays of drivers, presenting conditions entirely different and not to be compared.

The next three trips across were made from New York to Portland, each going over the overland route as far as Granger, and then turning north through Idaho and across Oregon. Percy Megargel made two of them, and Dwight Hess the third. The Oldsmobile cars were used in two and a Reo in the third. The Reo was driven back to New York by Megargel, starting, however, from San Francisco and running south through Los Angeles, Phoenix, Sante Fé, and Denver, before returning to the overland. The little one-cylinder car ran through the Winter months, but occupied 201 days in the passage, stopping for days at a time at the leading cities. This trip was followed by another departure from the beaten track by W. S. Gehr in a Glide car, running from Wenatchee, in Washington, through Idaho, Montana, South Dakota, and Iowa over absolutely virgin soil before getting to the usual route east of the Missouri.

Then came Whitman's 15-day trip in the Franklin, when five men drove in relays twenty-four hours a day, and Richard Little's 24-day trip in the Buick under the same conditions. These were all the attempts made to cross the country until the New York to Paris race started, when the Thomas, Zust, and De Dion made the run in Winter, and the Protos car went as far as Pocatello, in Idaho, which covered all of the worst part of the road. The Thomas's time was 42 days, including the thousand-mile detour south through Nevada from Cobre and up through Southern California, the Zust's 53 days, the De Dion's 56 days.

There seems to be every reason to expect that the competitors in the coming race, including the best cars made in America and abroad, would be able to make a material reduction in the Franklin's figures one way, even though speed should be but a part of the requirement of the trip. As far as the endurance phase of the race goes it will be absolutely unique in the annals of automobiling.

OCEAN GROVE THREATENED.

Tax Assessors May Make a City of Celebrated Camp Meeting Community.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 13.—Ocean Grove, the Summer recreation ground of American Methodism, encircled for nearly half a century with extraordinary religious watchfulness, protected and favored by legislation, has reached a point in its career which may possibly result in a terminatin of the resort as a corporation and force its incorporation as a borough, or a city.

William R. O'Brien, assessor of the Township of Neptune, working under the instruction of the Monmouth County Board of Taxation, which in turn is being guided by the State Board for the Equalization of Taxation, will begin on May 20 the assessment of the real and personal property within the limits of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association.

Heretofore the township has assessed the personal property, but the real estate has been exempt, the owners, or lessees, paying a lot tax, or "rent," as the Ocean Grove leases state, of about $10 a year.

When the new assessment is made the question will arise, it is declared, who really owns the property and who must pay the taxes—the association or the ninety-nine-year lessees of the land. If the association must pay a large sum of money will be needed. If the people pay, the $10 lot tax to the association may be discontinued, as its payment would constitute double taxation.

It is expected that the matter can be settled only in the courts.

FINDING JOBS BY PHRENOLOGY

Y. M. C. A. Hears of a New System to Help Boys to Their True Vocation.

Holding that the majority of boys do not succeed in after life because they are misfits, Frank P. Spears, Educational Director of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, outlined a novel plan at the annual dinner of the Educational Directors of all the Young Men's Christian Associations of New York, held at the Hotel Astor, Times Square, last night, by which it is hoped to successfully combat this problem.

In the main it is the establishing of a Vocation Bureau in Boston under the charge of Prof. Frank Parsons, the well-known psychologist, the object being to aid young people in choosing an occupation, preparing themselves for it, finding an opening in the chosen field, and building up a career of efficiency and success. Although it will be under the auspices of the association, it will be a separate work, and is backed financially by Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, one of Boston's richest women.

Prof. Parsons has devised a system under which by means of a personal examination of each applicant, and with the aid of phrenology and written answers to a number of pertinent questions, a scientific analysis can be made, based on the traditions, inheritance, and tendency of the man. Already many have been helped.

The speakers at last night's dinner included R. Fulton Cutting, Marcellus Hartley Dodge, and the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis.

LAFCADIO HEARN TRADUCED, HE SAYS

Writer's Letters Brought Forth to Defend His Memory from Dr. G. M. Gould's Book.

A "PHILADELPHIA DOCTOR"

Story of Their Acquaintance, Hearn's Loan and Pledged Library, Now Told for the First Time.

Ellwood Hendrick, an intimate friend of the late Lafcadio Hearn, has addressed to THE TIMES the following letter:

25 Pine Street, N. Y., May 13, 1908.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has lately appeared a book "Concerning Lafcadio Hearn," by Dr. George M. Gould of Philadelphia, which is such a venomous attack upon his memory and was so evidently written in anger that one is led to inquire what possible motive there could have been to prompt it. A perusal of the work in the light of the facts which I shall set forth demonstrates the book to be much more accurately "concerning Dr. Gould" than it is concerning Lafcadio.

Although the preface contains an apparently generous offer on the part of the author to send the proceeds of the abuse (after deducting the necessary expense of compiling it) to Hearn's widow, and despite the frequent references to the intimacy between the two men, the fact remains that for the last fifteen years of his life Hearn would have absolutely nothing to do with Gould, would not answer his letters, would not allow communications to be made to him even by proxy, feared him, hated him, avoided him.

Hearn Letter About Gould.

By way of indicating Hearn's reason for distrusting Gould, I give herewith a letter written by Hearn and now published for the first time:

"* * * Oh, about patronizing authors after that Chicago man's fashion, I forgot to tell you a story. You may remember I was in Philadelphia for about five months at the house of a physician named George M. Gould. This person had begged and prayed me to pass a Summer with him before I went. He told me if I ever mentioned money to him he would think it an insult; his only desire was to aid me. Really, I don't know much about Northern human nature—never did; I always take people seriously. Well, his wife, he told me at last, was jealous of his friends; and she was not pleased to have me about. Of that I had good evidence. He gave me money—for I was dead broke, and said: 'Go to New York and see what the Harpers can do to sending you to the tropics. Then come back and tell me.' A glorious friend. I told him: 'Alden has my books, worth $2,500; I can't take them from him just now, but later on I will get you to get them from him, and give him this letter,' (which I left with him.) 'All right,' he said, 'when you want money on those books I'll be glad to let you have it. And my home is your home.' Splendid fellow! I gave him a note of hand for the small sum loaned me.

"As soon as I got to New York I found a letter from him telling me he could never see me at his house again, but that as I had done some literary work for him he could lend me a little more, ($20.) At last I was forced on this Japan expedition. As soon as I left New York he sent the letter to Alden without waiting for news from me and got the books. From Japan I wrote to him to do so, only after he had already done it without my knowledge. On application for some of them by mail he wrote that our correspondence was over, sending me a volume for which he charged postage. And he never even returned my notes, in lieu of which I had asked him to take the books and settle the debt—trusting to his honor. So I paid dearly for that patronage. 'Bitter,' saith the Italian proverb, 'is another man's bread.' Isn't this sort of thing enough to disgust one with Western civilization?

"L. H."

The "Philadelphia Doctor."

This letter was written probably in 1890 or 1891; it is not dated. I add a second, dated April 16, 1893:

"Dear Hendrick: No letter from you this mail, but I'm writing to ask advice of a wiser head than my own. I told you the story of that Philadelphia doctor and how he treated me. Now, after a silence of nearly three years, he has written me a loving letter, and asks me if I want my books back! I won't answer his letter—because I can't guess the purpose of it. It might be simply to provoke such an answer from me as would give him evidence to support his possession of the books. I should like to get them back, for as Professor of English literature a complete collection of masterpieces such as the books represent, and such as I cannot now afford to replace, would be of immense value to me. I would be able to advance a reasonable sum to clear up the matter, but nothing over $150. The real debt was only $60, and I worked for him so as to more than cover that, entre nous, having assisted him to compile his medical dictionary, and having written an article to which he put his name, and which brought him $25. Then I got him in the way of a paper in the Arena, which gave him $85. However, here's the puzzle. Whether the letter is really a generous impulse or a fraud I don't know, and I don't know whether to answer it or not. Tell me, when you get time, what you think would be a wise course to follow. You see, he's not only got my books, but an I. O. U. note for $60, and a fictitious I. O. U. sent him only for the purpose of helping him to get the books into his hands."

The fictitious I. O. U. reads as follows:

"I owe to Dr. George M. Gould of Philadelphia the sum of $500 for board and lodging during the Summer of 1889. And in lieu of ready money I give to him unconditionally my library," &c.

Letter Gould Did Not Answer.

He wrote to Gould, asking him to sell the library, keep what he owed him, and remit the balance or to keep the books and send what he could, or to do whatever he pleased, trusting to his honor. Gould did practically nothing.

On Feb. 15, 1894, he wrote:

"* * * The Phila. doctor has sent me a second letter, which I inclose to amuse you partly, and partly to get your advice about. My silence seems to bother him. Letter 3 ought to prove more interesting. I answer none because something like an instinct tells me now not to. I can't attribute his motive to pure kindness, because he does nothing—only asks questions. He is a great coward, I know, on one subject—social opinion—the opinion of the Phila. 'circle' he hopes some day to get into. Perhaps he is anxious on that score by anticipation. Mercy! What scandal I am talking, considering that he might possibly be simply feeling sorry!"

A later letter requests me not to see Gould on his behalf with a view to getting his library for him.

Now, the exact contents of Gould's letter, telling Hearn that their correspondence was over, will probably never be known. But, giving Gould credit for not meaning what Hearn construed him to say, the fact remains that up to the present time Gould has possession of his library, his notes—in fact, everything that was Lafcadio Hearn's except the clothes he wore—up to the time of his departure for Japan. On Page 102 Gould naïvely suspects that, inasmuch as there were no books on Japan in the library, Hearn did not want them.

No Friend Would Betray His Trust.

As soon as Hearn was dead there appeared in Putnam's Magazine an article on him by his "closest friend," Dr. Gould, in which he says:

> Probably he never opened his heart so generously to any one as to me, nor did he so frankly allow another to look into his past life. But it was done, of course, with the unexpressed condition that it was to a friend, and that no friend would betray the trust.

Something must have changed his mind, and the cause of it is not obscure. Paymaster Mitchell McDonald, U. S. N., is Hearn's literary executor, and he was anxious, on behalf of the widow and children, to secure the library for them. Another reason (which Mr. McDonald explained) was to get some one to compile a volume of juvinilia from Hearn's earlier notes and sketches, all of which are included in the library in Gould's possession. He still has the library, and, although he declares that it is of no value to him, he belies his own statement by making a filling out of Hearn's unpublished writings to complete his spitebook.

Those of Hearn's friends who knew Mr. McDonald and sympathized with him in his efforts to get the library, were frankly annoyed and said so. This, in turn, augmented Gould's wrath to such an extent that he threatened to publish all sorts of scandals about Hearn if anything more was said about the library. "They mustn't blame me if their hero is badly soiled," said he. "It is all their doing." (This is quoted from his own stenographer's notes of an interview with a gentleman from Boston.)

Well, scandal is a pretty nasty business, and the people threatened were all of them perfectly quiet and good. They knew the book was coming out and hoped by saying nothing about the library that, although it would probably be full of errors, (because the doctor has nothing at first hand or from people in close touch with Hearn for the last fifteen years of his life,) there would be a certain understanding presumed that he would keep somewhere near the bounds of good taste. What happened I shall show by the following quotation from Gould's book, with a few comments by way of elucidation.

On Page 4 he says that Hearn was "deprived by nature, by the necessities of his life or by conscious intention, of religion, morality, scholarship, magnanimity, loyalty, character benevolence, and other constituents of personal greatness." On Page 5 he says: "Except in pursuit of literary excellence, Hearn had no character whatever." Now, when a man dies, mourned and beloved by a large part of a great nation, as Hearn did in Japan, whom hundreds of men who have studied under him declare to have been a noble inspiration, statements of that sort prove themselves to be not judgment but anger.

On Pages 15 and 16 he intimates in a pained way that Hearn may have been an illegitimate child. He is not certain; he just intimates it in the interest of "truth." Now, if Gould had not broken with Hearn he would have known that he had a half-sister, who was very fond of him, who certainly did not think him illegitimate, and who could have given him full details of the family.

On Page 18 he says Hearn could not speak French with ease or correctness. I think of that wonderful translation, "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard," and wish that we only had one such defective linguist with us to-day!

Hearn Misrepresented.

In the chapters relating to his life in Cincinnati, when he was about 20 years of age, he digs up every item that he can discover that may give distress to a sensitive reader. There are young reporters to-day who have a tendency to write of gruesome things. They will get over it just as Hearn got over it, but they will be more fortunate than he if they have no false friend sniffing around after their tracks to get material for "a study of their literary development."

On Page 54 we find this entirely original description of New Orleans:

> Perhaps the single city in the world which would satisfy his dream more nearly than could any other was New Orleans. Being psychologically for the most part of degenerate Latin stock, and especially of the French variety, with the requisite admixture of exotic and tropic barbarism; bathed, but not cooked, in the hot and brilliant sunshine he loved and hated; touched and energized by too little Teutonic blood and influence, New Orleans offered to the unhappy man the best possible surroundings for the growth of his talents.

On Page 100 Gould says he compelled Hearn to go to Japan. I was with him two or three times a week during the Winter of 1889-90 until he started, and he never seemed to think Gould made him go; never mentioned Gould as a determining factor.

Why He Went to Japan.

I understand that he went because of representations made by an employé of the publishing house of Harper & Brothers without authority, and of which the firm had no knowledge whatever. Now, he had no sort of a business head, and when he found things were not as he expected he held everybody connected with the establishment to blame.

On Page 103 we find that he could not teach English literature, (this despite scores and scores of his students who declare him to have been an inspired teacher,) and on Page 105 the loving friend finds that he chose beautiful themes for his writings because it was more profitable than the choice of repulsive themes and methods.

Gould cannot forgive Hearn for being without what he calls religion. Of course, there are those of us who, reading his works, find a marvelous insight into the soul and the worship and the ideals of the Japanese; and the Japanese themselves say so. The fact is, Hearn was absolutely and totally without hypocrisy, and this is what Gould cannot understand, and it angers him.

Hearn's Morals Defended.

On Page 117 Gould's abuse becomes amazing: "Hearn's views and practices as regards love and the feminine are not of sympathetic interest to those who think that monogamy is good and advisable." Now, concerning a man who was married in 1892, and died thirteen years later, leaving a sacred heritage of great love and constancy and faithfulness to his wife and children, this seems to me to be pretty low down. But Gould is an expert at this. After misquoting and twisting into totally unintended meanings one of his letters in the "Life and Letters" published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., he proceeds in this wise:

> When contemplating legal marriage with "his wife" in 1892 he calculated shrewdly the advantages of the plan. He arrived in Japan in 1890, and in less than two years "my little wife and I saved nearly 2,000 Japanese dollars between us.

Now if that does not seem to convey the idea that Mrs. Hearn was his mistress for a matter of about two years then I can't read. And aside from the question of taste in printing such sewage it is Gould's misfortune that it is untrue.

He then proceeds to berate Hearn for admitting that he is "not respectable," (and by a delightful coincidence he quotes from a letter in which Hearn declared that he was not respectable compared to Gould,) and is shocked beyond measure because Hearn adored Herbert Spencer and hated Virchow.

And so on. On Page 130 he refers to Mrs. Hearn and the four children as the "butterfly lives" dependent upon him, and on Page 131 we have another of Gould's fragrant blossoms of skunk cabbage: "His vision had become almost useless," he says, "* * * the furies of his atheism, pessimism, and lovelessness were close on his track * * * nothing was left, nothing except one thing, which, chosen or not, came at the age of 54."

It does seem as though he very possibly committed suicide, doesn't it? Well, he didn't; that's all. In a beautiful article by Ferris Greenslet in The Atlantic Monthly for February, 1907, the tender story of the last days of this same man, as told by his noble and devoted wife, may be found. MUST STAY PORTO RICANS.

Federal Court at San Juan Gives Important Decision as to Citizenship.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 13.—In the Federal Court to-day, Judge Rodey handed down a decision that has called attention to a new phase of the complex question of Porto Rican citizenship.

The Judge was hearing a libel suit against Vicente Balbas, editor of the Heraldo Español, in which damages of $15,000 are demanded. He held that Señor Balbas, although he was born in Porto Rico of Spanish parents, and in spite of the fact that he had obtained letters of naturalization from the Spanish crown in which he renounced whatever American or Porto Rican citizenship he had enjoyed, was still a Porto Rican.

The Judge reached this conclusion on the ground that if Spain could naturalize Balbas she could then make all Porto Ricans Spanish subjects by issuing letters of naturalization to them by royal order. He held that under the treaty of Paris, Balbas had become a citizen of Porto Rico, and that, consequently, he could not become a subject of Spain.

The decision of Judge Rodey virtually means that no citizen of Porto Rico can expatriate himself and become a subject of King Alfonso.

28 PRISONERS KILLED.

Not One of Those Who Tried to Escape at Yekaterinoslav Got Away.

YEKATERINOSLAV, May 13.—The attempt made yesterday by prisoners to break out of the Government jail here after making a breach in the wall of the guardroom with a bomb was a complete failure, but it brought about a horrible scene of slaughter in and around the jail building.

Twenty-eight of the prisoners were shot to death by the guard, and one other has since died of his wounds. Thirty were wounded, and it is expected that several of these will die.

The explosion threw the whole prison into a state of panic. The inmates who took no part in the plot gathered in the windows overlooking the courtyard. They were ordered to draw back, but refused, whereupon the guards fired volleys into the open windows. Two prisoners were shot down while attempting to escape over the roof of the building. Not one succeeded in getting away.

AMERICAN BALLOT IN MEXICO.

It Will Determine Whether Fourth of July Shall Be Wet or Dry.

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—One of the most extraordinary compaigns ever waged by Americans in a foreign capital is being hotly contested in this city. The issue centres about the manner of celebrating the Fourth of July, a number of Americans being opposed to the serving of liquors at the celebration, which is attended by from 25,000 to 30,000 people.

To settle this question the Council of Administration of the Society of American Colonies decided to hold an election, and the polls were opened yesterday morning at a dozen places where Americans congregate.

"Wet" and "dry" tickets have been put in the field, and the voting thus far has been as brisk and exciting as any ever held in the United States. The polls will close next Monday.

Says His Uncle Has Made the Family Contribution to the Tiger.

MONTE CARLO, May 13.—Prince Helie de Sagan played at the Casino last night and had a trifling loss. He said laughingly to a friend as he turned away from the tables:

"I don't care to play heavily; my uncle, the Duke de Dino, already has made the family contribution to the tiger."

The Duke called to-day on his nephew and Mme. Gould, bringing a large bouquet of roses. The three had luncheon together, after which the Prince and the Duke visited the Casino.

PEKING, May 13.—The revolutionists in Yunnan Province have had a setback, and it would now appear that the uprising has been stamped out.

STRASSBURG, May 13.—The German Emperor and Empress to-day attended the solemn inauguration of the restored Hohkoenigsburg castle, near Schlettstadt, in Lower Alsace. Over 800 persons took part in the pageant.

MANY GREEN FIREMEN, UNDERWRITERS FIND

Tests Show Lack of Experience in Getting Results from Their Engines.

MORE PROTECTION NEEDED

Especially in Downtown Congested Districts — Department Discipline Lax, Too, Says Report.

W. R. Mallalieu, assistant to the General Agent of the Committee of Fire Prevention of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, has forwarded to Commissioners of Accounts John Purroy Mitchel and E. Y. Gallaher, through George W. Hoyt, Chairman of the committee, and Henry W. Eaton of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, a copy of the report of the National board's engineers as to conditions in the Fire Department of New York.

The report states that while the practice of having Fire Department officers report buildings where explosives or inflammables are carried without a license or permit is a good one, it should not be depended upon longer for detailed inspection work, but that the surveyors of the Bureau of Combustibles should make periodical inspections of all licensed premises to see that the laws are being complied with.

It is pointed out that a number of highly congested districts are inadequately protected as the result of having no engine or truck houses within easy reaching distance. According to the report tests have shown that inadequate water supply prevents extra large engines from pumping to their full capacity, while one engine steams so poorly that it is impossible to run a capacity test. Of crews south of Fifty-ninth Street the assertion is made that out of forty-five tested twenty showed lack of experience in getting a reasonable water supply from their engines, and it is accordingly recommended that these crews be trained, while twenty-three engines should be taken to the repair shop and put in such capacity that they will deliver at least 90 per cent. of their reasonable capacity.

The report sets forth the make-up of the various companies, showing that below Fifty-ninth Street 38.7 per cent. of the firemen were fourth grade or "green" men, while 15.7 per cent. were third grade men, while companies in uptown sections where the dangers of fire are at a minimum there are frequently no "green" men at all.

While the rules and regulations of the Fire Department are said to be well drawn and adequate, the assertion is made that penalties are not exacted as systematically and severely as they should be, and that discipline is too lax with the men.

Many recommendations are made. One of the most important is that chemical engines be installed in all highly congested districts and elsewhere by equipping all hose wagons with chemical tanks, and that new engine companies be established near the following locations:

> Delancey and Willett Streets, East Thirty-third Street and Second Avenue, East Sixtieth Street and Second Avenue, East Ninety-sixth Street and Second Avenue, East 112th Street and Second Avenue, West Fifty-sixth Street and Eleventh Avenue, West Ninety-sixth Street and Broadway, West 123d Street and Eighth Avenue, West 151st Street and Eighth Avenue.

It is also recommended that an additional engine be provided with Engine 17, in Ludlow Street; that new ladder companies be established in various sections of the city, especially in outlying communities, and that water towers be placed with several companies that as yet are without them.

Other recommendations made are that all new and repaired engines be thoroughly tested; that no uniformed men capable of doing active duty, except possibly one to the Commissioner's and Chief's offices, be assigned to other than fire duty; that civil service requirements for weight limit and chest expansion be increased, and that the physical examination count 75 per cent., and the mental examination 25 per cent. in the final average; that the term of instruction be increased to six weeks and the probation period to three months; that prospective engineers be required to take a course at the engineers' school of the department; that a school of instruction be established for candidates for the position of company officers.

It is also recommended that the assigning of firemen to theatre details be discontinued, and that owners or proprietors of theatres be required by law to employ experienced men, able-bodied retired firemen preferred, to serve under the supervision of the theatre inspector or the Bureau of Violations.

DINES WITH CROWN PRINCE.

Walter McClintock Guest at Potsdam —Lectures on Blackfeet Indians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 13.—The German Crown Prince is following in his father's footsteps in the matter of showing conspicuous politeness to Americans.

His Imperial Highness and the Crown Princess entertained at dinner this evening Walter McClintock, the young Pittsburg anthropologist and protégé of Andrew Carnegie. The dinner was served in the Marble Palace at Potsdam and at its conclusion a large company was assembled in the palace to listen to a lecture by Mr. McClintock on the Blackfeet Indians of Montana, among whom Mr. McClintock lived for ten years, finally being adopted as a son by "Mad Wolf," the famous chief of the tribe.

Mr. McClintock lectured last week before the Royal Anthropological Society of Berlin, and the newspaper accounts of the event interested the Crown Prince so much that he arranged for a command performance at Potsdam.

An interesting feature of the entertainment was the singing by Mr. McClintock of a number of Indian war songs.

TO PULL OUT MEN'S TONGUES.

Ameer Prescribes Terrible Punishments for Afghans Who Fight Against British.

SIMLA, May 13.—As an earnest of his friendliness toward the British in respect to their trouble with the tribesmen, the Ameer of Afghanistan has issued a stringent order against preaching a holy war, decreeing that offenders against this order shall have their tongues pulled out.

He has also issued orders that all Afghans who join the recalcitrant border tribesmen shall have their feet cut off.

The British punitive force against the Mohmand tribesmen, under the command of Major Gen. Sir James Willcocks, has arrived at Dand, twenty miles north of Peshawur. It is evident that the tribesmen intend fighting, for they have sent their women and children away and have taken up their positions in the hills.

JAPAN SAYS NO TO CHINA.

Rejects Proposal for Construction of Another Railroad to Fakumen.

PEKING, May 13.—The Japanese Government has refused to take into consideration the modification proposed by China to her original opposition to the construction of the Hsin-Min-Tun-Fakumen Railroad. Particular objection is made to the proposal that Japan fix the distance at which she would permit the existing line to be paralleled. This would mean competition and involve Japan in a further outlay of capital. It is again declared here with emphasis that Japan will not permit the construction of a parallel line.

An agreement has been reached between China and Japan on the Yalu timber question. Japan concedes the protection of Chinese lumber companies, as well as the security of the lumber revenues of the Chinese Government.

SCIENTIST ON SPIRITUALISM.

Flammarion Says Man Has Unknown Psychic and Physical Qualities.

PARIS, May 13.—The recent recrudescence in France of public interest in psychic phenomena and Spiritualism has led Camille Flammarion, the astronomer, who not long ago gave the results of some of his investigations in a book called "Unknown Natural Forces," to publish an article on facts like levitation, which, he maintains, has been absolutely established. M. Flammarion concludes with these words: "The human being is still a mystery to physiologists and psychologists alike. He is endowed with unknown psychic and physical qualities, the discovery of which will constitute the future glory of science."

RETURNS HIS DECORATION.

Austrian Honored by Kaiser Thinks He Should Have Higher Grade.

VIENNA, May 13.—When Emperor William came here to pay his respects to Emperor Francis Joseph on the occasion of his jubilee, he distributed decorations and orders on every hand.

Among those thus honored was Dr. Weiskirchner, President if the lower house of the Reichsrath, who received the order of the third class of the Prussian Crown.

Contending that the bestowal of this order was not a personal favor but in reality a tribute to one of the country's institutions, Dr. Weiskirchner has returned the order through the foreign office to the German Embassy. He declares that his decoration should have been of a higher class.

SEIZED AS HE SAILS, TAKEN FOR ANOTHER

Immigration Officials Thought Perkins Was Parry and Dragged Him from the Mauretania.

HIS TICKET SAVED HIM

Showed It in Time to Get Aboard Again — Right Man Caught to be Deported Via Canada.

Bound eastward on a visit to his old home, John Perkins of Escanaba, Mich., had just settled himself in the steerage of the Cunarder Mauretania yesterday when immigration officials ruthlessly swooped down upon him and, to his surprise, insisted that he leave the country only by way of Canada. Being a citizen of the United States and a man of peace, Perkins vehemently protested against the parental care of the Government in choosing for him a route for leaving the land of his adoption. After he had been hustled off the liner it was discovered that a mistake had been made, and the exasperated Perkins was escorted back on board with many a Governmental apology.

This is how Perkins was placed in an awkward position: Some time ago there was taken to Ellis Island a young man named John Parry. He had migrated from Wales to this country via Canada, and later was picked up by the immigration officials and ordered deported on the ground that he might become a public charge. Some official cog slipped, and on the supposition that the Welshman had come to this country on a Cunard liner he was ordered back by that route on board the Mauretania.

Just a few minutes before sailing time the fact that the man had come into the country by way of Canada was discovered, and an order was at once issued to take him off the liner and send him back by the way he came. So the immigration officials boarded the vessel and seized Perkins, whose name they for the moment confused with Parry.

Perkins was led down the gangplank to the dock. He was in danger of going to England via Canada and at the Government's expense, when he thought to show his ticket, and succeeded in convincing the officials that he was not the man wanted.

He was released and escorted back on the ship, with apologies from the Inspectors who followed him. This time they found Parry, the right man. Confident that they had not made a mistake, they took him ashore. Just as they stepped from the vessel the gangplanks were hauled in.

MANILA, May 13.—Allen Gard, Governor of Lanao, is dead, the result of bolo wounds inflicted by Moros. He underwent a series of operations, from which he gradually sank and never rallied.

Gov. Allen Gard was graduated from the Yale Sheffield Scientific School in 1901. He was sent to the Philippines shortly after his graduation, and was at first in charge of a boys' school at Batangas. His father, William E. Gard, is in business at 71 Wall Street, in this city.

MUSIC for the Summer Home should be care-free—not music that requires labor to render it.
Attach to your piano (no injury or disfigurement) a TEL-ELECTRIC PIANO PLAYER, and you will enjoy better music than can be produced by any other piano player—better, even, than music played by hand—except that of the exceptionally talented.
For impromptu dances and song accompaniment, the Tel-Electric is perfect.
THE player mechanism may be placed on the veranda or deck of yacht—leaving the piano in its accustomed place.
You can interpret and play in the dark as well as under a heating light.
The fatiguing task of foot-pumping is eliminated.
WHILE the motive power is electricity, an electric current in the house or yacht is not important.

'KID' TEMPE'S SLAYER GIVES HIMSELF UP

He Sends Word to the Police and Detectives Meet Him by Appointment.

ACTED IN SELF-DEFENSE

Says Crowd of Italians Followed Him and Were Bent on Killing Him.

Central Office Detectives Goodenough and La Grue observed a powerfully built young German pacing restlessly back and forth at Fourth and Driggs Avenues, Brooklyn, last night. The young man gazed at the detectives, and, stepping up to them, asked:

"Are you fellows policemen?"

"We're detectives," the men replied; "Are you Oscar Mueller?"

"That's me. I'm the man that wanted to give himself up. It was me killed 'Kid' Tempe."

The young man chatted pleasantly with the detectives on the way to Headquarters, and there he was locked up, charged with having caused the death of the Italian who was mortally stabbed on Tuesday evening in full view of a crowd on the Third Avenue Elevated station platform at Twenty-eighth Street. Then, before he was taken to a cell, young Mueller told what led him to kill Tempe and later to surrender himself.

"It was my life or theirs," asserted the young man. "I had to use the knife, for there was a gang after me, and they'd have got me yet if I hadn't given myself up."

Had he not surrendered himself it is probable that the death of the ex-Italian prizefighter would have gone down in police annals as unsolved, for after the affray on the elevated station Mueller escaped, and the police were able to get no trace of him until he telephoned to Headquarters last evening from Brooklyn making an appointment to meet the detectives near the home of a young woman on whom he had been calling.

"The trouble started last Friday," said Mueller in explanation. "I am a butcher and have been employed by a man named Kahn at 66 Catharine Street. William Koenig, who lives at 104 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, works there also, and on Friday was carrying sides of beef from a wagon drawn up on the sidewalk. Two Italians passed by and Koenig asked them to step aside. But before they could do so he unintentionally bumped into them.

Mueller said that the men got several friends, and, after abusing Koenig, they started to throw things into the store, finally even daring to enter after the butcher.

"I saw that Koenig was likely to get the worst of it," continued Mueller, "so I jumped in, and between us we threw the Italians out. Next day Tempe, whose real name, I understand, was Thomas Terino, of 84 Cannon Street, came around to the store and said to me:

"'I have been employed by the gang to do you up. Now, I haven't got anything against you, so I tell you what we can do. I'll wallop you a couple of stiff ones in the jaw, and then you can bind up your head. The $50 they promised me looks good, and I'll split even with you.'

"'Why,' I told him, 'you couldn't do me up if you wanted to, you Dago,' and then I got so mad that I pitched into him, and I guess I gave him enough before he got out of the shop. Then I began to think I might have been foolish, and it occurred to me that next time they would go after me with a knife, so when I left the shop I slipped a food knife in my pocket.

"Sure enough, when I got on the elevated train four of the gang, among them Tempe, followed me. I thought I'd get off at Twenty-eighth Street, where I saw a crowd on the platform, so as to avoid trouble, for I didn't think they'd have the nerve to come at me in a crowd. They did, though, and the first thing I knew I was falling downstairs with the four of them on top of me. I got my knife out and stabbed one of them, and then I got a shot at Tempe.

"Then the gang ran off and I ran, too, finding that the fight was over. I didn't dare go back to the shop this morning, so I called up Koenig on the 'phone. He told me to keep away and said there were more than 200 Italians looking for me around the neighborhood. Then I decided that the best thing I could do would be to give myself up."

The other man whom Mueller stabbed is now dying in Bellevue Hospital. His name is Pasquale Lovaglio of 336 Water Street. He visited St. Gregory's Hospital, in Gold Street, Tuesday night and had a wound in the left side near the heart dressed. The police were notified and, apparently being satisfied by the story that the man told, did not arrest him.

After the police heard Mueller's story Lovaglio, who had been transferred to Bellevue, was placed under arrest as a material witness.

Mueller, who lives at 476 Fourth Avenue, is 28 years old. He will be arraigned in court this morning, and it is believed that he will be freed, as the police are convinced that he acted in self-defense.

Mueller was taken from Police Headquarters to Bellevue Hospital at an early hour this morning. While the detectives were approaching the cot with their prisoner, Lavaglia raised himself up on his elbows, and, as Mueller got near the cot, he tried to leap at him.

"That's the man who killed my partner, and who did for me," shouted the Italian, and it was only by the quick work of the detectives that he was restrained from attacking Mueller in the hospital.

The hospital attendants said that Lavaglia had said when he was brought into the hospital: "If they bring that Mueller in here I'll kill him sure."

HIS SHOT HALTED PURSUERS.

Italian Fired on Crowd That Was Chasing Him in Street.

A yelling crowd of men and boys running down Ninth Avenue in pursuit of a young Italian attracted the attention of Detective Grady of Headquarters, who was at Twenty-third Street, at 7 o'clock last night. As the crowd drew nearer the fugitive stopped suddenly, whirled about and fired at the crowd.

Grady started on the run for the man, but before he reached him the leaders of the crowd had closed about him and were trying to wrest the gun from him.

The detective pulled his own revolver and threatened to shoot up the crowd unless it desisted. He was in danger of being rushed when several other policemen arrived. At the station the Italian said he was Michael Warino, 19 years old, a watchman employed by an asphalt company which is repairing the pavement at Ninth Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street.

James Reiley of 401 West Twenty-eighth Street followed Grady and his prisoner into the station and said that Warino had drawn his revolver and tried to shoot him when he and some others remonstrated with the man for making insulting remarks to some girls of the neighborhood. Warino denied the charge, but Grady locked him up at Headquarters on Reiley's charge of attempted felonious assault.

FISCHER-HANSEN BRIEF.

He Told O'Brien He Considered Himself a Great Criminal Lawyer.

Assistant District Attorney Smyth filed a brief yesterday with Judge Rosalsky, opposing the application of John F. McIntyre to dismiss the indictment for extortion against Carl Fischer-Hansen, the lawyer charged with extorting money from Joseph O'Brien of Philadelphia.

In this brief Mr. Smyth says: "By way of indicating that a criminal charge was imminent against Mr. O'Brien, the defendant said to him: 'You know I'm Carl Fischer-Hansen, and I consider myself one of the greatest criminal lawyers in this city.'"

CIVIL SERVICE LAX, COMMITTEE REPORTS

Growing Exempt Class Used to Benefit Politicians, Reform Association Charges.

BUT IT'S A FORCE FOR GOOD

Speeches at the Association's Dinner—McCarren Accused of Using the Controller's Office.

The Civil Service Reform Association had a business meeting and a dinner last night at the Hotel Astor. At the business meeting its members heard read the annual report, which said that the exempt class of employes was growing entirely too large in New York, and accused Senator Patrick McCarren of using the Controller's office for rewarding his political henchmen. The old set of officers was re-elected. Then came the dinner, at which little but pleasant things were said.

Corporation Counsel Pendleton reviewed the history of civil service legislation in the United States since the passage of the first civil service law in Congress twenty-five years ago, which was introduced by Senator Pendleton of Ohio. The speaker said that the bill was most important in that it marked the definite departure from the spoils system, a system that debauched the political appointing power. Much good legislation, aiming to give positions to men who were most fitted for them, had followed that first bill in Congress and all the States, said the speaker.

Mr. Pendleton recalled what a hue and cry there was against the civil service idea when it was first broached, but he was sure that now no office holder would be willing to go back to a system which demanded that most of his time be given to answering one way or another the many applicants for petty positions under his headship.

Everett P. Wheeler said that last night's dinner was a sort of silver wedding affair. He was early associated with the civil service reform movement in New York, and he told what the system owed to Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Senator Pendleton, George William Curtis, Dorman B. Eaton, Edwin M. Shepard, Joseph H. Choate, and Ellihu H. Root. Civil Service, Mr. Wheeler declared, has greatly improved the conduct of public affairs, and has almost entirely broken up the vicious system of assessments upon office holders for political purposes.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman of New Jersey, who introduced in that State's Legislature the Civil Service bill that became a law on April 10, told of the long fight made before the bill finally became a law.

President Frank L. Polk of the New York City Civil Service Commission told what a great mistake was the idea of civil service men that they could not be removed if they proved incompetent after having passed the examination, and that officeholders often gave that as an excuse for bad administration, but that it was only an excuse.

He noted that last Winter's panic had caused applicants by the hundreds to try for the civil service examinations. He said that in a recent examination for process servers there had been 2,600 applicants, though the city calls for only some twenty of these men a year. He was sure that too many try the examinations; to cure this supposed evil he would charge a fee. He declared that the Civil Service Reform Association was the "conscience" of the Civil Service Commission.

Fullerton L. Waldo, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Civil Service Reform Association, was enthusiastic about two or three recent victories that the organization had won in fights against the "Philadelphia ring of politicians."

REPORT ATTACKS McCARREN.

Says He Has Used the Controller's Office in Two Administrations.

The Executive Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association presented its annual report to the organization last night at a meeting in the Hotel Astor. The report tells about harmful legislation that has been foiled for the time being, and contains recommendations for the future. It is signed by Samuel H. Ordway as Chairman.

The report noted that President Roosevelt had recommended that fourth-class Postmasters, some 60,000 in number, be classified, but that Congress had ignored his recommendation.

It is recommended that the State Civil Service Commissioners meet oftener than they do now. "The present custom of the Commissioners of holding meetings in Albany once a month," says the report, "leads, we are compelled to feel, to too hasty and not well-considered action in some important cases, and to an undue delay in others, which may prove extremely embarrassing to an appointing officer, who is entitled to a prompt decision of the question at issue."

The report holds that the exempt class of employe has grown too much in size, especially among the employes of the municipal courts, forty exemptions among whom were allowed in this city alone last year, in addition to exemptions in the same class already made by the Legislature.

The report states that after a long fight a piece of bad civil service legislation was defeated in the Legislature, but the association is sure that it will come up again. A bill was introduced to amend the civil service section of the Constitution by granting to veterans of the Spanish war, the Philippine insurrection, and the Boxer uprising a 10 per cent. advance on their averages made in examination. There are 30,000 of these veterans in the State, it is said, and they are young men. If the law were passed it would be "practically useless for a civilian to compete for public office," it is declared.

According to the report, the exempt list in the city's Finance Department continues to grow, and promises to keep on growing. Already exempt employes in that department number 152, it is stated, which is one-fourth of the total number of men used there. And now the Controller has asked for twelve more. That the exempt list in the Finance Department has been used often for the benefit of Patrick H. McCarren, both under Controller Grout and Controller Metz, is one of the charges made in the report.

"The most flagrant disregard for the civil service law was shown," the report continues, "in the employment of so-called 'temporary expert clerks' to make new records of assessment and arrears in the Finance Department, for which an appropriation of $48,000 was secured."

This work began in March, 1907, the report goes on, and the "temporary expert clerks" are still at work. Moreover, appropriations to pay them continue to be made from time to time.

ALL BRYAN AND TAFT.

Ex-Gov. Francis Says They Are the Only Candidates He Can See.

David R. Francis of Missouri, who is stopping at the Hoffman House, said yesterday that to his mind it was a foregone conclusion that Taft and Bryan would be the opposing candidates for the Presidency. "I do not consider that any one else has a chance in the respective conventions," said Gov. Francis. "I know Johnson and like him. He is a good man, but the outlook presents nobody but Bryan to my mind. While I am not here on any political mission, and do not care to talk politics, I want to say a word for Missouri. My State is Democratic and in the next election its vote will be cast for the Democratic candidate.

"As for the business outlook, it is very encouraging. I have traveled extensively of late and find favorable prospects for a renewal of prosperity throughout the country. The crops are excellent and want of confidence, which was the primary cause of the panic, is fast passing away."

BRYAN ADVICE IN MINNESOTA.

Rumored That He Asked Conservative Attitude Against Gov. Johnson.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 13.—On the eve of the Democratic State Convention it was persistently rumored to-day that William J. Bryan had sent word to his lieutenants in this State to act in a conservative manner in making a fight against the candidacy of Gov. Johnson for the Democratic nomination for President. The report could not be confirmed, but T. T. Hudson of Duluth, who was recently reported as having received this word from Mr. Bryan, did not deny it.

The Bryan leaders were in conference for the greater part of the day in the Merchants' Hotel. They declared that the story that they intended to hold a "rump" convention to-morrow in the event of their losing the contests before the Committee on Credentials in the State Convention was premature.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—When William J. Bryan to-day was shown the report that he had sent word to his political lieutenants in Minnesota to act in a conservative manner in making a fight against the candidacy of Gov. Johnson for the Democratic nomination for President, he declined to comment on the report in any way.

LOUISIANA DIVIDED ON BRYAN.

House of Representatives Tables Resolution Inviting Him to Address Body.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 13.—Sentiment regarding the Presidential race was to-day shown to be divided in the Louisiana House of Representatives when the resolution inviting William J. Bryan to address the body came up. The resolution had been amended so as to include Gov. Johnson of Minnesota and Senator Culberson of Texas.

Represetative Locke opposed the amendment to the resolution, saying that Mr. Bryan would undoubtedly be the choice of the Democrats at Denver, and he offered a substitute resolution indorsing Bryan.

A motion was then made to lay the whole matter on the table, and this motion prevailed by an overwhelming vote.

TWO PRESIDENTS' SONS AT FOUNDERS' FEAST

Gen. Grant and Dr. Lyon G. Tyler Among the Speakers at Annual Event.

THE PURPOSE OF THE ARMY

Gen. Grant Says It Is to Get Us Out of Trouble When Diplomats Get Us Into It.

Two sons of President's of the United States spoke at the annual dinner of the local Society of the Order of Founders and Patriots of America in the Hotel Manhattan last night. They were Major Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, commanding the Department of the East, and Dr. Lyon Gardiner Tyler, President of William and Mary College. Rear Admiral Casper F. Goodrich, in command of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was another speaker.

Gen. Grant was introduced by Edward H. Hall, Governor of the society, who presided. Mr. Hall had made the statement that "In God We Trust" was desired on the coinage by descendants of the country's founders. With reference to the motto, Gen. Grant said that he thought it would soon be the motto of the American people with reference to the army.

"We have been trusting a great deal to God," said he, "and thus far He has favored us. No Nation is so pugnacious as the American Nation, and so illy prepared to take the consequences—I'll take that part back because we are better prepared than the majority of people think. Our force is efficient, but perhaps we are not so well prepared to communicate that efficiency to outside numbers.

"The object of the army is one that most people do not realize. I have been at peace conferences and heard awful talk—senseless talk. I went to a peace conference at which Gen. Woodford was, (Gen. Woodford sat near the speaker's table at the dinner) and there was much talk about the uselessness of the army. The thought occurred to me that the row that Gen. Woodford got us into with Spain was an answer to that kind of talk."

Gen. Grant said this with a smile.

"The army," he continued, "is an instrument to get you out of trouble when statesmen and diplomats get you in."

Speaking of the training that even the privates in the regular army received, Gen. Grant said that some of the men became so valuable that "predatory corporations" offered them higher pay and they left the army.

"There was a prisoner over on Governors Island who had eighteen months to serve," he said. "I set him with a Sergeant to repairing the telephones. After he had finished the telephone company sent over and offered him high pay if I would let him off. They offered bigger pay for him than the officer who had taught him was receiving. I let him go, and he is now doubtless a good citizen of New York, and perhaps a politician. His income is now larger than that of my boy, who graduated at the head of his class and is now on an eight-million-dollar job."

Gen. Grant told something of the army manoeuvres planned for a part of May and a part of June, and said that the trying out of the officers would "give us a few officers to rely upon if Gen. Woodford gets us into trouble with powers more important than Spain."

Other speakers were John E. G. Higgins, President of the St. George Society; Col. John W. Vrooman, and Arthur J. Birdseye, President of the Connecticut Society of the Founders and Patriots.

In the afternoon the General Court of the order met in the Governor's Room in City Hall to elect a successor to Admiral Dewey as Governor General of the order, the Admiral having served two full terms, the maximum allowed by the customs of the order. Gov. Rollin Simmons Woodruff of Connecticut, who was not present, was made Governor General. Other officers elected were:

Gen. Edward Franc Jones of New York, Deputy Governor General; the Rev. Joseph F. Folsom of New Jersey, Chaplain General; Clarence Ettienne Leonard of New York, Secretary General; Capt. William Alexander Newman Dorland, Treasurer General; Robert Hewes Hinckley of Pennsylvania, Attorney General; William Edward Fitch, M. D., of New York, Register General; George Frank Newcomb of Connecticut, Genealogist General; William White Knapp of New York, Historian General, and George Edward Scranton of Pennsylvania, Judge James Albert Betts of New York, and Edward Lewis Ripley of Connecticut, Councilors General for three years.

CALIFORNIA FOR TAFT.

Secretary Has a Majority Over Roosevelt of 296 Votes.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—Complete returns of the unofficial primary for President of the United States have been received from throughout the State by Gen. George Stone, Chairman of the Republican State Committee. The vote polled is 10,500. Of this Taft has a majority over Roosevelt of 296 votes.

The partial returns first received indicated that Roosevelt was the choice of the Republican Electors of the State, and it was thought that the delegates to the National Convention would have to be so instructed. Now, of course, the instructions will be for Taft.

FAVOR ROOSEVELT THIRD TERM

Atlanta Business Science Club Wants Corporate Abuses Destroyed.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 13.—At a dollar dinner given by the Business Science Club, an organization composed of the business men of Atlanta, a poll was taken which showed an overwhelming sentiment in favor of a third term for Roosevelt. The result of the poll follows:

Roosevelt, 60; Bryan, 14; Hughes, 7; Taft, 6; Johnson, 8.

Nearly all of those present were Democrats. They gave as their reasons for desiring a third term for Roosevelt the belief that in four more years he would be able to destroy the corporate abuses which he has been attacking.

Thomas E. Watson, the Populist leader, declared that, while it looked like Taft for the Republican nomination, he believed that the Chicago Convention would stampede to Roosevelt and renominate him.

BERRY MAY HEAD TICKET.

Democrats and Temperance Forces in Pennsylvania Favor Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Leaders of the temperance movement in this State declare that the next Gubernatorial campaign will be waged on a local option issue, and that William H. Berry of Chester, ex-State Treasurer, will be the candidate of the forces opposed to the domination of the saloon in Pennsylvania politics.

Mr. Berry has already received assurances from Democratic leaders that no matter what the issue may be in the next campaign, he is the logical candidate of the party because of his work in the exposure of the Capitol scandal.

Two Michigan Counties for Johnson.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUGHTON, Mich., May 13.—Ontonagon County has gone on the Johnson band wagon. At the County Convention held at Rockland delegates were named to the State Convention, and resolutions were adopted indorsing the candidacy of Minnesota's Governor for the Presidency. At Hillsdale the Democratic County Convention's delegates to the State Convention were not instructed. This means that the delegation will be one of those "open to reason" at Lansing—otherwise, for Johnson.

Fail to Instruct for Bryan.

BOSTON, May 13.—The Democratic Convention of the Eleventh Congressional District to-night elected James P. Timility and Fred A. Finnegan delegates to the National Convention. A motion to instruct the delegates to vote for William J. Bryan for Presidential candidate was defeated, and they will go to Denver uninstructed.

MAY CONTEST WALLACE'S SEAT

Republican Opponents of Gov. Hughes Belittle the Victory in Niagara District.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 13.—A report reached here this evening that William C. Wallace will have trouble from Democratic quarters. According to this report Henry A. McMahon, the Democratic candidate, is about to begin a contest before the Democratic Board of Supervisors in Niagara County against Wallace, on the ground that he had not been lawfully elected.

This contest may cause delays which would upset any plans of having the race track bills passed at the present extraordinary session.

A prominent Republican said here today that, as a result of the victory won for the Governor's cause in the Niagara-Orleans Senatorial contest, it would now become a matter for consideration with the leaders just how closely the fortunes of the Republican Party in this State are bound up with the Governor's race track bill and other reforms.

Senator Raines, majority leader in the upper house, said to-day that he had made a canvass of the Senate, and had failed to find any change in the views of the eight Republican Senators who voted against the bills at the regular session.

With Senator Foelker of Brooklyn, who was one of the twenty-five Senators to support the Governor, seriously ill, and the prospects that he may resume his seat at the special session very slim, even the election of Wallace would not save the bills from defeat unless somebody can be won over from the opposition.

With this end in view Gov. Hughes will continue his campaign in the districts of Republican Senators who voted against the Agnew-Hart bills. It was said today that the Governor in all probability would pay particular attention to the district of Senator Cassidy, and that within a few days he would make a speech at Elmira, where Congressman J. Sloat Fassett, who sent the "John-and-I" telegram, lives.

Senator Wilcox of Auburn, one of the eight Republican Senators who voted against the race track reforms, voiced the general attitude of the opposition to-day. He said: "When the amount of public agitation is considered, and the fact that the Governor personally stumped the district, I cannot see how the election of Wallace by such a narrow margin in a district that is overwhelmingly Republican can be made an indication that the people are in favor of the race-track legislation. Public opinion, it seems to me, was not altogether with the Governor."

The Senate and Assembly held brief sessions to-day, and then adjourned until Monday evening. In neither house was there a quorum.

PLEASED BY HUGHES OUTLOOK

Gen. Woodford Says Governor's Letter Strengthened His Candidacy.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, President of the Hughes National League, issued this statement yesterday apropos of the election of Senator Wallace:

"We have not been discouraged in the last six weeks when Secretary Taft's managers were vehemently claiming everything in sight. We are not unduly elated now that the tide has begun to set our way. Gov. Hughes's straightforward, manly letter about the Vice Presidency and his splendid personal victory in the Niagara Senatorial fight have certainly strengthened his candidacy for the Presidency. The plain people are beginning to understand just what kind of a man he is. They like a fighter who doesn't brag, but who fights and wins. We are claiming nothing, but are entirely satisfied with the outlook for the Governor's success."

GOVERNORS CHEER ROOSEVELT'S TALK

He Tells Them Conservation of All Natural Resources Needs One Coherent Plan.

PUTS JOHNSON IN CHAIR

Carnegie Pleads for More Careful Husbanding of Coal and Iron, Which He Says Are Being Wasted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The conference of Governors on the conservation of natural resources got under full swing at the White House this morning. They crowded the East Room and listened to a speech by the President with some of the old-time ring in it. The Governors had been sufficiently warmed up by the weather before they reached the White House to be ready for anything demanding enthusiasm, and they applauded the President with non-partisan liberality.

When he declared his intention to continue the Inland Waterways Commission and make it permanent whether Congress makes an appropriation for its expenses or not, there was vigorous cheering.

After delivering his speech, the President brought the conference right down to business by suggesting that there ought to be a committee on resolutions, and incidentally naming them. Then he paused to give the Governors opportunity to second the motion.

They looked around at one another, however, as if uncertain just what to do. Finally Gov. John Johnson came to the rescue with a motion to appoint the committee named by the President. At the afternoon session the President gave Johnson his reward by announcing that he would call on the Minnesota man to preside when he was not present himself.

At that there was a lively clapping of hands from all over the room, the Republican Governors giving Johnson the hand heartily. The President grinned as if he had been caught injecting politics into the game where it should not have been. Then he grinned some more and said: "And I am sure we all shall be glad to hear anything Mr. Bryan cares to say." Loud applause greeted that and Bryan walked to the front and talked to the President in a stage whisper.

Whereupon Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Mr. Bryan prefers to wait until nearer the close of the conference."

Two Important Ideas.

Two ideas resulted from the conference: The first is that a permanent organization between the States and the Nation is necessary, and will probably result from the present conference, to accomplish the end sought. The second, suggested by Secretary Root, is that there is no limitation by the Constitution to the agreements which may be made between the States, subject to the approval of Congress. The two ideas fully developed, it is predicted, would result in the conservation of the energies and resources of the nation through uniform and unconflicting laws, both National and State.

Forty-four Governors and 500 other persons taxed the capacity of the East Room. The others were Cabinet officers, Supreme Court Justices, Senators, Representatives, experts in all lines of industry. President Roosevelt's fifty-minute speech was many times interrupted by applause, and when he finally reached his point of praise of the Inland Waterways Commission, the Governors stood up and shouted.

The President's Speech.

President Roosevelt spoke in part as follows:

"The occasion for this meeting lies in the fact that the natural resources of our country are in danger of exhaustion if we permit the old wasteful methods of exploiting them longer to continue.

"The wares of the merchants of Boston of Charles, like the wares of the merchants of Ninevah and Sidon, if they went by water, were carried by boats propelled by sails or oars; if they went by land were carried in wagons drawn by beasts of draught or in packs on the backs of beasts of burden. The ships that crossed the high seas were better than the ships that had once crossed the Aegean, but they were of the same type, after all—they were wooden ships propelled by sails, and on land, the roads were not as good as the roads of the Roman Empire, while the service of the posts was probably inferior.

"The growth of this Nation by leaps and bounds makes one of the most striking and important chapters in the history of the world. Its growth has been due to the rapid development, and alas! that it should be said, to the rapid destruction, of our natural resources. Nature has supplied to us in the United States, and still supplies to us, more kinds of resources in a more lavish degree than has evtr been the case at any other time or with any other people.

"The wise use of all of our natural resources, which are our National resources as well, is the great material question of to-day.

"Disregarding for the moment the question of moral purpose, it is safe to say that the prosperity of our people depends directly on the energy and intelligence with which our natural resources are used. It is equally clear that these resources are the final basis of national power and perpetuity.

"Already the limit of unsettled land is in sight, and indeed but little land fitted for agriculture now remains unoccupied save what can be reclaimed by irrigation and drainage. More than half of the timber is gone. Many experts now declare that the end of both iron and coal is in sight.

"The enormous stores of mineral oil and gas are largely gone. Our natural waterways are not gone, but they have been so injured by neglect, and by the division of responsibility and utter lack of system in dealing with them, that there is less navigation on them now than there was fifty years ago. We have so impoverished our soils by injudicious use and by failing to check erosion that their crop-producing power is diminishing instead of increasing.

Questions Far Reaching.

"These questions do not relate only to the next century or to the next generation. It is time for us now as a Nation to exercise the same reasonable foresight in dealing with our great natural resources that would be shown by any prudent man in conserving and widely using the property which contains the assurance of well-being for himself and his children.

"In dealing with the coal, the oil, the gas, the iron, the metals generally, all that we can do is to try to see that they are wisely used. The exhaustion is certain to come in time.

"But in dealing with the soil and its products man can improve on nature by compelling the resources to renew, and even reconstruct, themselves, while the living waters can be so controlled as to multiply their benefits.

"On the average, the son of the farmer of to-day must make his living on his father's farm. There is no difficulty in doing this if the father will exercise wisdom. No wise use of a farm exhausts its fertility. So with the forests. We are over the verge of a timber famine in this country, and it is unpardonable for the Nation or the States to permit any further cutting of our timber save in accordance with a system which will provide that the next generation shall see the timber increased instead of diminished. Moreover, we can add enormous tracts of the most valuable possible agricultural land to the National domain by irrigation and by drainage.

One Coherent Plan Needed.

"We can enormously increase our transportation facilities by the canalization of our rivers so as to complete a great system of waterways on the Pacific, Atlantic, and Gulf Coasts and in the Mississippi Valley, from the Great Plains to the Alleghanies, and from the northern lakes to the mouth of the mighty Father of Waters. But all these various uses of our natural resources are so closely connected that they should be co-ordinated, and should be treated as part of one coherent plan, and not in haphazard and piecemeal fashion.

"We are coming to recognize as never before the right of the Nation to guard its own future in the essential matter of natural resources. In the past we have admitted the right of the individual to injure the future of the Republic for his own present profit. The time has come for a change.

Legislation for All.

"Any enactment that provides for the wise utilization of the forests, whether in public or private ownership, and for the conservation of the water resources of the country, must necessarily be legislation that will promote both private and public welfare.

"The opinion of the Maine Supreme bench sets forth unequivocally the principle that the property rights of the individual are subordinate to the rights of the community, and especially that the waste of wild timber land derived originally from the Sttae, involving as it would the impoverishment of the State and its people, and thereby defeating one great purpose of government, may properly be prevented by State restrictions.

"Finally, let us remember that the conservation of our natural resources, though the gravest problem of to-day, is yet but part of another and greater problem to which this Nation is not yet awake, but to which it will awake in time, and with which it must hereafter grapple if it is to live—the problem of National efficiency, the patriotic duty of insuring the safety and continuance of the Nation."

Andrew Carnegie's Address.

Andrew Carnegie spoke on "The Conservation of Ores and Related Minerals" in part as follows:

"Iron and coal are the foundation of our industrial prosperity. The value of each depends upon the amount and nearness of the other.

"Unless there be careful husbanding, or revolutionizing inventions, or some industrial revolution comes which cannot now be foreseen, the greater part of that estimated 2,500,000,000,000 tons of coal forming our original heritage will be gone before the end of the next century, say two hundred years hence.

"Still more wasteful than our processes of mining are our methods of consuming coal. Of all the coal burned in the power plants of the country, not more than from 5 per cent. to 10 per cent. of the potential energy is actually used; the remaining 90 per cent. to 95 per cent. is absorbed in rendering the smaller fraction available in actual work. There is at present no known remedy for this. These wastes are not increasing; fortunately, through the development of gas-producers, internal-combustion engines, and steam turbines they are constantly decreasing; yet not so rapidly as to affect seriously the estimates of increase in coal consumption. We are not without hope, however, of discoveries that may yet enable man to convert potential into mechanical energy direct, avoiding this fearful waste. If that day ever come our coal supply might be considered unending.

"By 1938 about half of the original supply of iron ore will be gone, and only the lower grades of ore will remain, and all the ore now deemed workable will be used long before the end of the present century.

Iron Ore Going.

"I have for many years been impressed with the steady depletion of our iron ore supply. It is staggering to learn that our once supposed ample supply of rich ores can hardly outlast the generation now appearing, leaving only the leaner ores for the later years of the century. It is my judgment, as a practical man accustomed to dealing with those material factors on which our National prosperity is based, that it is time to take thought for the morrow."

Mr. Carnegie spoke of the supplies of copper, zinc, lead, and silver, and of gold, saying, "Doubtless the duration of the supply will depend solely upon commercial conditions." Continuing, he said:

"It was not resources alone that gave this country its prosperity, but inventive skill and industrial enterprise applied to its resources. Individually we have been both forehanded and foreminded; Nationally we have been forehanded chiefly through the accident of discovery by John Smith and Walter Raleigh, but Nationally we are not yet foreminded. So far as our mineral wealth is concerned, the need of the day is prudent foresight, coupled with ceaseless research in order that new minerals may be discovered, new alloys produced, new compounds of common substances made available, new power-producing devices developed.

"I urge research into and mastery over nature.

"I urge on the Executives here assembled as our greatest need to-day the need for better and more practical knowledge. If our career of prosperity is to continue it must be on the basis of completer control of National sources of material and power than we have thus far exercised, a control to be gained only by research."

Speaking of the waste of natural gas, which he called the ideal fuel, I. C. White, State Geologist of West Virginia, said:

"At this very minute this unrivaled fuel is passing into the air within our domain from uncontrolled gas wells, from oil wells, from giant flambeaus, from leaking pipe lines, and the many other methods of waste at the rate of not less than one billion cubc feet daily, and probably much more."

He commended the Indiana statute for the conservation of natural gas. He also condemned the waste in the mining of coal.

John Mitchell, speaking of the waste of coal, said he thought that not more than 25 per cent. of the coal mined was lost.

"If American manufacturers and other great consumers were required to pay a higher rate for fuel, it would enable mining companies to produce and prepare for market countless millions of tons of coal which under present conditions are left in the ground, lost to the present and to future generations," he said.

He said that foreign consumers pay from one and one-half to two and one-half times as much for fuel as consumers here do."

The climax of the afternoon session was the speech of Secretary of State Elihu Root. Mr. Root wa sreceived with great enthusiasm, and the remarks he made met approval by a demonstration equaled only by that accorded the President on his entrance at the morning session.

Mr. Root said in part:

"What occurs to me to say in response to your very kind invitation is what comes naturally to the mind of the officer who is the offiical medium of communication between the Government of the United States and the Governments of the States. No one can overestimate the importance of maintaining each an devery one of the sovereignties of the States, and no one can overestimate the importance of maintaining the sovereignty of the United States. The Nation cannot perform the function of the State sovereignties. If it were to undertake to perform those functions it would break down—the machinery would not be able to perform the duty.

"I feel impressed with the idea that the forty-six sovereign States in the performance of their duties of government are lagging behind the stage of development which the other sovereignties of the earth have reached.

"The Constitution of the United States prohibits the State from making any agreement with each other without the consent of Congress, but you can make any number of agreements with the consent of Congress. Why should not the powers that are reserved to the State sovereignties be exercised by those sovereignties with a wise regard for the common interests? It is high time that the sovereign States of the Union should begin to perform their duties with reference not only to their own individual local interests, but with reference to the common good."

The connection with the Treasury Department might bear to the questions under discussion was dwelt upon by Secretary George B. Cortelyou.

Gov. Burke of North Dakota was elected Honorary Secretary.

Twenty-seven of the Governors and 150 business men of Washington heard the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Treasury, the minority leader in the House, and other speakers discuss questions involved in the subject being considered at the conference of Governors at the White House this week at a dinner to-night at which they were the guests of the Washington Board of Trade.

BROWNSVILLE VOTE AFTER ELECTION

Foraker Abandons Effort and Moves to Make Bill Special Order for Dec. 16.

DEMOCRATS URGE A VOTE

But the Republican Plan Had Been Fixed—Leaders Assure Foraker of Support for Re-election.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Republican ability to smother factional differences had another demonstration in the Senate to-day when Senator Foraker abandoned his effort to secure a vote on his Brownsville bill at this session and himself moved that it be made a special order for Dec. 16. This is the culmination of a tremendous effort that has been put forth in the last few days by several of the Senate leaders, including Aldrich, Hale, Crane, and Allison.

Foraker has persisted with much vigor and many threats that he would stick to his course to the bitter end and force a vote on his bill at this session, which would make all the Republicans line up, so that the negro voters could see on which side they stood. All kinds of persuasion, threats, and promises were made to get Foraker to quit. Practically all the Senate leaders assured him they would give him all the support in their power in his fight for re-election if he would consent to a postponement of this troublesome question until next Winter. They promised to help him by stumping the State in his behalf and to assist in raising funds for his campaign.

When the Democrats saw what had been fixed up for them they did their best to force the Republicans to a vote to-day, but were signally beaten. The Republican game had been fixed up too well to be shifted by any effort of the Democrats.

It had been announced that Foraker would ask to-day to have a time set for a vote on his bill, putting the discharged soldiers back in the army without regard to the President's wishes, and that he would speak on the subject. Among the Senate leaders and a few others it was known what had been going on, but the result was not generally known. A good many of the Republican Senators knew nothing of it, including Senator Dick, Foraker's colleague, who has followed Foraker into all his troubles with the Administration. So when Foraker rose it was the expectation he would go on with his fight. He started off as if that were his intention by asking for a vote to-day.

Warren Asks for Delay.

He said the matter had been discussed at length and that the Senate was sufficiently familiar with it to vote intelligently. That brought up Senator Warren, Chairman of the Military Committee. He pointed out that Senator Lodge was absent, called home by the dangerous illness of his sister, and that it would be unfair to accede to Foraker's request, especially as Mr. Lodge had a speech which he wanted to make on the case.

Then Foraker asked that the bill be called up Saturday for a vote. Warren rose again to say that this date was too early; that Lodge might not be back. Foraker promptly suggested that next Tuesday would be agreeable to him. Again Warren objected, this time that he was on four conference committees and could not find time to enter upon the long debate that consideration of the bill would entail.

"Ah, so the Senator does not want consideration at this session?" Foraker inquired blandly.

Warren protested that he would like to get through with the Brownsville matter as quickly as possible. Foraker then asked that his bill be made the unfinished business for next session, with a special order for a vote on Wednesday, Dec. 16.

Up to that time Senator Culberson, the Democratic leader, had not caught the drift of what was going on, and seemed to labor under the impression that Foraker was really striving for an early vote. Now he jumped in to try to force what Foraker was postponing, or at least to get a roll call, which would have the effect of lining up the Republicans on the negro question. He offered an amendment striking out the date, and substituting the words "Saturday of this week." This brought on a long wrangle, and Aldrich projected himself into the fight.

"I want to call the attention of Senators on this side of the Chamber, as well as those on the other side," he said, "that we hope to adjourn within a few days. We will be unable to do this if this bill is taken up at this time. I think the request of the Senator from Ohio is proper and right, for there undoubtedly will be extended discussion of the bill before it can be voted on. I hope the Senator from Texas will not press his amendment."

Culberson declined to withdraw. He said the matter had been thrashed out sufficiently to enable every one to vote, and he gave it out insinuatingly that those on the Republican side who held similar views could count on a solid Democratic support.

While Culberson argued, Aldrich, Hale, Frye, and Crane surrounded Foraker and talked eanestly with him. Then the Ohio man made a powerful plea to the Democrats to let thematter go over till December. After that Culberson's amendment was tabled, 42 to 27, Briggs, Bulkeley, Gallinger and Smith of Michigan voting with the Democrats.

The motion to postpone carried 62 to 6. Briggs, Bulkeley, Burrows, and Smith were the only Republicans voting against it, while the Democrats were Gore and McLaurin. Scott refused to vote.

Immediately after the result of the roll call had been announced, Bulkeley and Scott went over to Foraker's seat. They both appeared excited, and argued with Foraker vehemently. Neither of them afterward would divulge the topic of conversation. Foraker later gave out a statement of the reasons for his action. It follows:

> The reason for postponing action on the Brownsville bill until next December is that at this time it was impossible to get a vote if I could get the bill before the Senate, while next December, in accordance with the understanding arrived at, every Republican in the Senate will be under obligation to help me get the bill before the Senate and to get a vote. The difference between insisting upon action now and postponing it until then is, therefore, that at this time the probability is that I would not get anything, while at that time I shall at least get a vote, and I have great confidence that the measure will pass.
>
> If so, the men will have a relief that will restore to them all their rights. Moreover, there will not be any loss to them or anybody else by delay. So far as I was personally concerned the President's announcement that he would veto my bill if Congress should pass it, and refuse to enforce it if we should pass it over his veto, had nothing to do with my action. Such announcements are becoming common, and while doubtless they still affect the action of some people I do not pay any attention to them.
> What I am concerned about in this measure is to get a full and real restoration of these men to all their rights, and I do not intend to allow anything personal to myself to stand in the way of accomplishing that object.

Bulkeley, who had supported Foraker throughout, was highly incensed by the outcome of the fight. He gave notice just before adjournment that he would call up the Warner bill on Monday and offer a substitute for it. The substitute will be practically a replica of the Foraker bill.

Legacy in Prospect for Floretta Whaley

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., May 13.—Mrs. Kaziah Whaley, grandmother of Floretta Whaley, who ran away with the former Rev. J. K. Cooke, the Hempstead Episcopal rector, filed her accounting to-day of the will of the late John Whaley, her son, and the girl's father. The estate is valued at $25,768. Debts amount to $4,987. Mrs. Whaley has a life interest in the estate. At her death it is divided between the two girls, Floretta Whaley and Edna Seymour Snedeker.

ANOTHER COL. STEWART CASE

Congressional Relief Is Asked for Commander of President's Yacht.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The disturbance in the Senate over the case of Col. W. F. Stewart, whom Senator Rayner calls the American Dreyfus, has already resulted in application being made for Congressional relief in another case in such a manner that Senator Warren declared this afternoon it was a menace to the discipline of the army and navy. He was speaking on his motion to refer to the Committee on Military Affairs Senator Rayner's resolution regarding the Stewart case.

"Behind this resolution," said Warren, "lies an attack not only on the President, but on the discipline of the army and navy. Since this question has arisen I have been approached by two army officers and one navy officer in a case said to be similar to this."

The subsequent explanation which he gave of the case showed it to be that of the commanding officer of the President's yacht Mayflower, when she went aground recently. There was a court of inquiry in his case, however, and he was transferred to one of the battleships as navigator.

The discussion of the resolution brought out another letter from the President. This one was to Senator Taliaferro of Florida and practically repeated the statement of Stewart's case previously made to Rayner. The resolution was finally referred to the Committee on Military Affairs after Rayner had obtained a sort of promise for action some time.

Light on the precise attitude taken by the President in the case of Col. Stewart has been given to certain of the President's friends in Congress, and the prediction is made that the recent speech of Senator Rayner of Maryland may be replied to with vigor. It is explained that in detailing Col. Stewart to Fort Grant, Arizona, without command, the President has taken the one course open to him in desiring to avoid any procedure which might result in the punishment of Col. Stewart by depriving him of his pay upon retirement.

In giving effect to his determination to eliminate Col. Stewart from commanding troops for the good of the army it is explained that the method adopted by the President is regarded as the most direct and at the same time legally justifiable. Should he order a board of inquiry, the finding of such board would go to the President for review. He might approve or disapprove the finding, and might make any order with reference thereto which seemed in his judgment to be warranted.

HOPE FOR VREELAND BILL.

Leaders Gain Votes of Insurgents by Agreeing to Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—In the face of serious opposition in the Republican ranks to the Vreeland bill, adopted by the conference Monday night, the House leaders spent to-day in sounding the insurgents on what nature of amendments would win their approval for the bill. The steersmen of the House currency programme agreed this afternoon to an amendment which already has taken several votes from the insurgent ranks.

The amendment is designed to meet the objection of the insurgents that the bill makes the Government responsible for National banknotes. It strikes out the phrase to be borne on the face of the notes that they will be "redeemed by the United States in lawful money," and inserts instead that the notes are "secured by bonds or other securities approved by the Secretary of the Treasury."

Representative Weeks, who has pushed the Vreeland bill ever since it was introduced, counts on a majority of nearly a dozen in favor of the bill.

Representative Hayes, who has opposed the Vreeland measure, and who yesterday declared that he had about thirty Republican votes in sight against it, said to-day that he is still unsatisfied with the bill, but that as the amendment concedes one of the chief points at issue, he and other insurgents will probably vote for the bill when it comes up to-morrow.

Many of the opponents of the measure, however, will fight it to the last, among these being Mr. Fowler and Mr. Prince.

ELKINS IS AGAIN BALKED.

Vainly Attempts to Get Action on the Commodities Clause.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Another determined but unavailing effort, was made to-day to get through the Senate the Elkins resolution suspending the commodity clause of the Railroad Rate bill.

Elkins dwelt on the recessity for giving the roads more time to dispose of their properties. He quoted figures to prove that 91 per cent. of the acreage of anthracite coal lands was in the hands of the railroads, and showed that suffering to the people would result if the roads were prohibited from marketing the coal.

Elkins and Clapp attacked bitterly an amendment offered by Fulton, which practically placed the rate-making power with the Inter-State Commerce Commission. Fulton finally withdrew it on Elkins's promise that the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce would report on the proposition early in the next session. An amendment by Heyburn prohibiting a greater charge for a short than for a long haul was defeated, 30 to 23. The resolution went over until to-morrow.

PAPERMAKERS' SIDE TO BE HEARD NOW

Unless Herman Ridder Is Called to Testify Before Select Committee.

NIGHT SESSIONS PROBABLE

Working Hard to Make a Report on Free Pulp and Paper at This Session of Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—John Norris of THE NEW YORK TIMES, having completed yesterday his direct testimony before the select committee investigating the paper industry, was on the stand for several hours to-day, answering questions put by the committee.

In general the questions were directed with a view to finding out exactly what losses newspapers had suffered during the recent financial depression. Mr. Norris pointed out that a loss of advertising had been the most serious item against the profits of newspapers, but that the papers had uniformly kept their sale prices down and did not try to pass on this loss to the subscribers.

Though the publishers have formally finished their case, it is possible that Herman Ridder, who is now in Washington, may take the stand to-morrow. Otherwise the manufacturers will have a hearing.

The committee is working hard to conclude its work in time to make report at this session of Congress. To further this end, Chairman Mann to-day announced that the committee probably will hold night sessions.

Mr. Norris said that there had been a material decrease in the demand for paper since December. He said that a shrinkage in advertising began in New York City about Nov. 10 last, and that it averaged about ten columns per day for each paper. One paper, a Sunday issue, shrunk 130 columns, as compared with the corresponding Sunday the previous year. The average advertising in the Sunday papers, he said, shrunk about 30 columns.

"What was the character of the advertising that shrunk?" asked Chairman Mann.

"It was largely of the luxurious, like automobiles. There also was a shrinkage in real estate advertisements."

"For what period did that shrinkage continue?" asked Mr. Stafford.

"It is still on," replied Mr. Norris.

Mr. Norris said that The New York Herald, New York World, and New York Journal have low-price contracts for paper. The Herald, he said, had been paying $1.95 on a production basis, which would bring it down to about $1.80 on the same basis as other papers. The New York World, he said, in the first six months of last year, was using paper at the rate of 44,000 tons per annum, and had a contract, he understood, for 30,000 tons at a low price. The World bought in the open market 7,000 tons at $2.41, an increase of about $10 per ton in price. This, he said, was from January to July, 1907, during the period of "artificial stimulation of prices."

In reply to a question by Mr. Ryan as to whether any of the newspapers which were receiving their paper at $40 a ton or less were complaining of the price. Mr. Norris mentioned The New York World as one, and said possibly there were others. He also said that one or two members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association were not in accord with the present demand.

"Also," he continued, "a number of newspapers, some of them members of the association and some of them not, are opposing it on the editorial side and favoring it on the business side. Then there are a number of papers which sell at 3 cents, which, by reason of the fact that they think that anything that increases the cost of producing the 1-cent paper will help them, the 3-cent papers are opposing any action by Congress."

"It's Different Now."

The plays that are drawing are those that are "different."

The books that are read are those that are "different."

The clothes that are selling are those that are "different."

Times have gone by when people were satisfied with the same old "stand-bys."

Men to-day demand clothes that are different—in design, shade and construction—they do not want clothes that look like the garments they have been constantly wearing—they want something different.

Brill Clothes are selling big because they are different—that's because Brill clothes are New York's most advanced clothes.

Advanced in fabric,
Advanced in model,
Advanced in construction,
But not advanced in price.

The New York Americans beat the Clevelands yesterday by the score of 7 runs, one Ball, and a Keeler. The gentlemen from Ohio sent four pitchers to the delivery well, and every one of them was broken.

If the Cleveland pitching staff had been longer, the New York score had been stronger.

Every one of the 12,000 rooters, including the Cohan Family Robinson, expressed much satisfaction at the 7 to 2 verdict, which, in a way, atoned for the Tuesday occasion, when Mr. Joss and his slapstick officiated as executioners of Yankee hopes.

Mr. Cohan, in a few brief but well-chosen remarks, said to those in his favored neighborhood that he was glad to be there. "There is an atmosphere of refinement about this game," said Mr. Cohan, "which, I regret to say, is sadly lacking in other sports." (Here Samuels Harris and Fitzpatrick abruptly left the grounds.) "When I say sports," explained Mr. Cohan, in sincere apology, "I mean pastimes, not persons. Boy! call those two gentlemen back. In conclusion, I wish to say that baseball is a game that you need not be ashamed to take your own father to. Papa, stand up."

"I thank you," said Jerry, the elder. "I hope you have all seen my little boy play-act. Here is a pass for the 17th of this month."

"I trust," said Mister George, to turn the conversation from his sire's pardonable commercialism, "I hope there will be no more Jossing to-day."

There was not. Lattimore essayed to hold the Yankee princes down, and Lattimore lasted exactly two innings. Then came Rhoades, nicknamed the Colossus, but nothing at all like the pitcher that Joss is.

At the beginning of the New Yorks' seventh Umpire Evans said: "Graney will now pitch." Stahl hit Graney and got to first all right, but when he tried to steal second they had him arrested. Conroy likewise found Graney, and then the bold Ball, who had been making himself obnoxious to the visitors all afternoon, advanced to the plate and swung a wicked bat. When the bat landed on Mr. Graney's delivery the ball boomeranged back at the pitcher with a force that nothing short of a stone wall could have stopped. The untutored Graney flung out a willing hand in a burlesque on ball stopping, but the hit went right along almost without a pause. Ball—the player—reached first and Conroy camped on third, but by this time all the other players had left the field, escorting the sacrificial Graney, and all clamoring for a doctor. Graney was finally patched up and walked away. Ball noted that it was Graney's left fin which had been bandaged. "What a pity!" said Elberfeld's understudy, regretfully.

Mr. Graney uses the right hand in pitching.

Speaking of understudying, if this Mr. Ball keeps up his present gait, he won't be sitting around waiting for any player's shoes—he'll have the baseball bootmakers begging to outfit him according to his own measure. He was all over the place yesterday, nailing flies that seemed to lie in the territory of the third baseman or the catcher, bunting the ball and beating it to first, banging out two-baggers, and sliding successfully for the third, scoring a run almost before the batter himself had started for first, and disabling the enemy whenever the chance offered or he could make the chance. Ball is a grand little fellow at short.

Kid Elberfeld please write.

New York scored once in the first, three times in the second, and three times in the sixth. That makes seven runs. Cleveland got two tallies in the third, but that's all the worry the Ohio crowd caused young Master Manning, who made his bow to the local audience, ever critical of pitching performance, yet ever ready to cultivate a bud of promise. And that's certainly what Master Manning amounts to, in a flowery way of speaking. He pitched the whole of nine innings, and was just as steady at the wind-up as he was at the offset when the foemen went out one, two, three. He struck out five Clevelandites, and just to show he was a versatile little fellow, swung lustily in the sixth for the space of two bases, scoring the bounding Ball.

Pitcher Manning, on yesterday's form, distinctly will do.

It was in the sixth inning also that the home run happened, Keeler being the responsible agent. Manning, as related, had hit, scoring Ball, and then Niles had fouled out. Keeler smashed out a beautiful four-bagger, which just about reached a sign that was smuggled in when the W. C. T. U. wasn't looking, and every one got on his feet and uncovered the same as they do at a London banquet when some one says: "And now, gentlemen—the King!"

P. S.—The name of the last of the Cleveland pitchers was Chech.

EASY VICTORIES IN SPEEDWAY MATINEE

CLARO IN WINNING FORM

Gracie Pandit First in Big Field—Judge Boardman Dropped Heat to Charles Brandon, but Won Event.

With a single exception, every event on the programme of the opening matinée of the Road Drivers' Association yesterday on the Speedway was decided in straight heats. The exception was in the Class D trot, when Charles Brandon, driven by William Cahill, won the first heat from Judge Boardman, with C. H. Story in the wagon. Judge Boardman turned tables in the second heat, and followed this advantage up by winning the third heat and the event.

Many scratches marred the otherwise interesting programme. This was particularly the case in both the Class A trotting and pacing. Invader captured the premier trotting event from Silver Ore, the only other contender, but the time was the slowest of the afternoon, the first heat requiring 1:19 for the Crawford horse to win. While the pacing event was decided in much faster time, the winner, T. B. Leahy's Who Knows, did not require much exertion to lead Redbird, the other entrant, home in each heat.

That the horses are not yet ready for their best efforts is shown by the defeat of several favorites in slow time. Claro performed well under the clever handling of Joseph F. Gibbons, and easily took the measure of Phyllora in the Class E pace. Gracie Pandit showed her old-time speed in defeating a trio of fast horses in Lord Bromley, Virginia Belle, and First Demand in the Class E trot.

M. C. Reynolds's Annie Q. sustained her Sunday brushing reputation by beating a big field in the Class F trot. Charlie Belden scored an easy victory over A. J. D. in Class B, while Dicker led a big field home in two consecutive heats in Class C. The pacing events were better contested. Kate Nelson won for E. J. La Place in Class B, Hiram Abiff scored two heats for the silver cups in Class C, and Cuban finished first in Class B, after warm races with Ready Boy and Sally A. The summary:

Class E—Pacing.
Claro, ch. g., (Joseph F. Gibbons)..........1 1
Phyllora, b. m., (G. L. Buckman)..........2 2
Time—1:14; 1:15.

Class E—Trotting.

Shakeup in Columbia Crew.

Coach Rice of Columbia gave the crews the shakeup yesterday which has been threatened since the loss of the race with Annapolis on Saturday last. The removal of Keator from seven in the first boat to seven in the second caused a general interchange of positions. Starbuck, who rowed six in the first boat, took Keator's place at seven, and Ryan was put into six from stroke of the second. Clapp was changed from three in the second to four, and Hauser from seven to three.

In preparation for the Harlem regatta on Decoration Day two four-oared gigs were boated, composed of the stern four and the bow four of the second boat. These fours will row in the junior and senior events on Memorial Day.

"Merry Widow" Waltz on Skates.

The Merry Widow Waltz was shown in a new style last night at the Madison Square Roller Skating Rink in East Twenty-fourth Street. The occasion was a Merry Widow Waltz competition on skates, and judging from the gyrations and undulations gone through by the five pairs of competitors in the event, the originals must "go some" to beat the performers on the wheels. To the tune of the famous "waltz" these five pairs swung around the spacious hall, while the judges, among them John Considine and "Honest John" Kelly, conferred among themselves as to the relative merits of the competitors. The results:

Merry Widow Waltzing Competition.—Won by Miss Tannenbaum and Mr. Weber; the Misses H. and K. Sturman, second; Miss Mae Hinck and Charles McCormack, third.

Half-Mile Race for Girls.—Won by Miss M. Heckert; Miss W. Hultin, second; Miss M. O'Shea, third. Time—2:13.

PITTSBURG, May 13.—Three days of strenuous playing against the Pirates helped none in the struggle of the Giants to climb into second place on the championship ladder. With each team credited with one victory Mathewson was selected for to-day's game, but with Honus Wagner careening around the shortstop patch the locals showed no sign of fear, but on the other hand went into the fray with a fearlessness born of determination and not only walloped the Giants, but drove their mighty pitcher out of the box and won the game handily by 5 to 1.

For three innings Mathewson was at his best, but in the fourth the Pirates broke into the run-counting column. This, however, was but an introductory effort, as in the next essay the locals showed exactly what they are capable of doing when they are tuned to concert pitch, even against the mighty "Matty." The trouble started when Becker beat out a bunt. Then Bridwell and Mathewson swelled the error column, a couple of well placed singles following and four tallies were added to the Pittsburg score, and incidently indicated to Mathewson that he had arrived at his stopping off place. In the latter part of the game McGraw presented a new battery, Crandall and Needham, with the result that the Pirates got away with no more runs and could scratch out but 3 singles from the young twirler.

At no time were the Giants dangerous. The visitors awakened a bit of hope in the eighth inning when with one man out Shannon walked and went to third on Tenney's single. Donlin flied out and Shannon scored the first and only run made by the visitors on Wilson's throw to the plate. The hope was short lived and with the third out went all the hopes of the Giants for squeezing Pittsburg out of second place. The score:

Hendrickson High Gun at Traps.

John H. Hendrickson of Long Island City, the ex-champion trapshooter of America, carried off the honors in the class shooting at the Bergen Beach Gun Club grounds yesterday. In the seventeen-yard class W. C. Damron of the Crescent Athletic and Bergen Beach Clubs, and T. J. CORNELL OARSMEN DROPPED.

Coach Courtney Lets Out Good Men for the Sake of Harmony.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 13.—The Cornell rowing camp was thrown into great confusion to-day when it was learned that four of the strongest men in the 'Varsity ranks had been dropped for the rest of the year. The entire undergraduate community is greatly aroused, for it is the most remarkable incident in Cornell rowing history.

L. W. Gavett, member of two victorious 'Varsity crews at Poughkeepsie; J. H. Bromley of last year's 'Varsity and several second 'Varsities; J. H. Holt, stroke of last year's 'Varsity four and stroke of two second 'Varsities, and S. I. Weed, stroke of the 1909 freshman crew, and considered a sure selection for this year's eight, have all lost their places, and were tipped off by the management that they had better resign. All four quit the training table and stopped rowing.

Coach Courtney said to-day that his action was prompted in the interests of the crew. He declared that, although every man dropped was a good oarsman, they did not seem to work together with the other oarsmen, and, as he was expected to turn out a winning crew, there was nothing to do but to expel them. In the last three weeks the 'Varsity has gone from bad to worse, and, despite frequent shifts they have been regularly beaten by the second crew.

To cap the climax the freshman eight beat them Monday night by 9 seconds in 2 miles. This was "the straw that broke the camel's back," and the "old man" immediately got rid of the men he deemed responsible. With the Harvard race only two weeks away, Cornell's situation is very serious, but Coach Courtney said that, although he might lose at Cortland, he felt confident that he would have a first-class crew at Poughkeepsie. Dissention in the crew is supposed to be at the bottom of the trouble.

The 'Varsity crew is now made up as follows: Bow, Frost; No. 2, Bayer; No. 3, Clark; No. 4, Dods; No. 5, Brinton; No. 6, Backus; No. 7, Samger; stroke, Cox; coxswain, Clarke.

Harlem Lawn Tennis Play.

Smashing and spectacular racquet work in the beginning of the doubles added zest to the third day of the open tournament on the courts of the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club, 131st Street and Seventh Avenue. Twelve pairs are entered for this event and two were eliminated yesterday. Henry H. Mollenhauer and L. M. Burt engaged Edgar Leo and Gustave F. Touchard in a slashing two sets, in which the former pair won, 6—4 and 6—1.

Somewhat slow progress was made in the endeavor to bring the singles out to the semi-final round. Two of the brackets were filled by Henry H. Mollenhauer and J. P. Paret. The summary:

Men's Open Singles.—First Round—J. Condon, Westchester, defeated W. M. Fischer, Bristol, 6—4, 3—6, 6—0.

Second Round—J. Condon, Westchester, defeated L. H. Fitch, West Side, 6—1, 6—3.

Capt. Al Foster took a big deck load of salt-water fishermen on the Angler to two of the best deep-sea fishing places yesterday—off Seabright, and then to the Seventeen Fathoms Bank. At neither point, however, was the fishing good. The weather conditions were ideal for good sport, and while the water had quite a roll on this should not have affected the biting of fish. Off Seabright a moderate number of sea bass and blackfish were caught, while at the banks the majority of the fish that were landed were of the ling species.

In the deep water off Premium Point blackfish have been numerous, and striped bass are frequently taken. On Tuesday James Hudson and Walter Carrick of Harlem caught between them fifteen blackfish and five striped bass, one of the blackfish weighing four pounds.

A nice mess of flounders and porgies was caught around the long dock at Ulmer Park yesterday morning by Johnny Turner of South Brooklyn.

Billy Courtney, the bridge tender at Harway Avenue, says that run of fish at present in that portion of Coney Island Creek is without precedent. Flounders and porgies are picked up daily in great numbers, while big blackfish are numerous. Crabbing is also excellent, the size of the crabs being unusually large.

Best STOCK Car of the World.

¶ Consistent, smooth running, such as was exhibited by the STEARNS cars in the recent Briarcliff Race, is an object lesson of which we feel justly proud. A STEARNS defeated all other American and 9 foreign cars.

Reliable Construction

¶ The fact that no adjustments or repairs were necessary throughout the entire 250 miles on any of our 8 STEARNS cars speaks more for reliable construction than could be told in a volume of argument.

¶ These results have been appreciated by our friends—Guy Vaughan's car was bought immediately after the race—our sales have since been of a record-breaking character.

A NEW UNION.

It is not difficult to see that President ROOSEVELT regards his speech, delivered yesterday at the opening of the Conference on the Conservation of Natural Resources, as quite the most momentous of his public addresses. The convocation of the Governors of all the States—for the first time in our history—with the President, the Senators and Representatives in Congress, the Cabinet, and the Supreme Court, he compares with that gathering at Philadelphia, its President GEORGE WASHINGTON, the outcome of which "was the Constitution which made the States into a Nation." He observes that, in its elemental conception, the gathering of the Fathers was "merely a waterways conference," and traces the idea of the Federal Union to its origin in the desire of the States most advantageously to use their natural resources. In effect Mr. ROOSEVELT declares that the meeting this week at Washington may and should result in the formation of a new Union, based upon a civilization superior to that which gave birth to the Republic.

We are the ancients, was Sir FRANCIS BACON's dictum. We should be greater than the so-called ancients, who were the inexpert spirits of a callow age. The President points out that during the century and a quarter of our National existence industrial progress has exceeded that of the preceding 6,000 years, while the times of the founders were not essentially different from the age of the first Phoenician sailing ships, of the Pharaohan mines, of the Ninevehan and Sidonian merchantry, of Athens with its wooden walls, and Rome with its imperial postroads.

But the new civilization, with its heightened standards and its vastly augmented consumption of natural products, has thus far subsisted according to the primitive principle of destruction. The coal and iron deposits, the primeval forests and the fertile soils, originally thought inexhaustible, will not endure the hundredfold demands of the Nation's growth without the application of a new principle—conservation. Hence there appears in Washington this week, along with the State dignitaries whose predecessors made Independence Hall historic, a group of scientific advisers to whose teachings our forebears would have inclined astonished ears. These men know best how to utilize our mineral fuels and alloys, doomed, even with their care, to dissipation. And they will tell us, what the founders never dreamed, that with the heritage of the forests half destroyed and with the soils impoverished by reckless tillage and failure to check erosion, they may be restored, enriched, and even made more productive while the farmer and the forester crop them. The deserts and the swamps shall bloom again.

From a Nation born of a plan that exhausts the resources of the States, President ROOSEVELT prays for a rebirth in a Union formed of a coherent and co-ordinated plan of thrift. "In the past," the President says, "we have admitted the right of the individual to injure the future of the Republic for his own present profit." His words should mark a change and a better era.

TRANSFERS.

The receiver of the Third Avenue Railway reports that the travel has decreased 60,000 daily, but that there has been no increase of income due to the stoppage of exchange of transfers with the Metropolitan. In other words, the passengers have been incommoded, and the road has not been benefited. That is only another way of saying that the exact point has not been discovered where transfers bring travel with advantage to both parties to the bargain. Singular as it may seem, the transfer system was born through the need of stimulating travel. The north and south lines in New York always have been congested, but the east and west lines languished comparatively in those archaic days. The theory was that both systems of transit would benefit by a system of mutual feeding and distribution.

The theory was correct, and worked well until it was worked to death. When conductors used the transfers as a substitute for nickels in their settlements with their employers, and when contracts for transportation were used to attract customers for "shines and hair cuts," it was obvious that the corporations were being robbed. The beneficiaries are now being punished, not by imprisonment, but by deprivation of their privileges, and the privileges of the just are withdrawn along with those of the unjust. There is nothing singular about New York's experience in this respect. Other cities are passing through a similar experience, and are adopting remedies fitted to the emergency. Some are charging a cent for the transfers, and those who are not receiving them as a gift seem to think they are worth a cent. Other cities are adopting a new form of transfer, making it more difficult for them to be used for mere pleasure trips, or in reverse routes, like an excursion or round-trip ticket. It is to be desired that the transfer system in some way should be restored to what it was, and was designed to be, an accommodation for mutual advantage.

THE HOUSE OF GOVERNORS.

Secretary Root builded better than he knew when, at the dinner of the Pennsylvania Society in this city on the evening of Dec. 12, 1906, speaking of the need of laws for the regulation and control of great business and corporate interests in their relation to the people, he said that "the people will have the control they need, either from the States or from the National Government; and if the States fail to furnish it in due measure, sooner or later constructions of the Constitution will be found to vest the power where it will be exercised—in the National Government."

We have always construed this, not as a threat of greater centralization, which was the construction put upon it in many quarters, but as a warning to the States that they must do their duty. In the authorized edition of Mr. Root's speech, published in this city, this title is given: "How to Preserve the Local Self-Government of the States." That makes it plain, even if the text of the address had left any doubt about it, that the distinguished speaker was exhorting the States to maintain their power and authority, lest the Federal authority should have to be invoked to repair their neglect. "Every State," he said, "is bound to frame its legislation and its administration with reference, not only to its own special affairs, but with reference to the effect upon all its sister States, as every individual is bound to regulate his conduct with some reference to its effect upon his neighbor."

It was in this utterance, we suppose, that Mr. WILLIAM GEORGE JORDAN found the suggestion for the remarkable and novel plan for an annual assembly of the Governors of all the States in conference, the details of which he set forth in our columns yesterday morning, and which has been already fully presented in his pamphlet. It is, indeed, most probable that President ROOSEVELT borrowed Mr. JORDAN's idea in assembling the Governors now in conference at Washington, for it seems that the pamphlet containing the details of the plan was sent to the President more than a year ago. In Mr. JORDAN's own words this is the suggestion:

> I then proposed a new element in American politics, to be known as the House of Governors. I proposed that the Governors of the forty-six States meet annually for a session of two or three weeks to discuss, consult, and confer on vital questions affecting the welfare of the States, the unifying of State laws, and the closer unity of the States as a Nation. The House of Governors would have no lawmaking power, nor should it ever aspire to such power. Its force would be in initiative, in inspiration, and in influence. The Governors would seek to unite on a general basis of action on great questions to be submitted to the Legislatures of the respective States in the Governors' messages.

We see nothing unconstitutional, subversive, or dangerous in the idea of an annual meeting of the Governors of all the States. On the contrary, it has many merits, and more will develop in practice. It is for the general welfare and good of the Nation that we should have uniform State laws regulating marriage and divorce, insurance, corporations and trusts, child labor, conveyancing, mortgages, and many other subjects of legislation as to which it may be said that the public interest is not local and varying, but National and common. By conferring upon projects of legislation the Governors would not only form their own minds and formulate their ideas in such a way as to enable them to speak with knowledge and clearness in their messages to their Legislatures, but through the inevitable publicity of their proceeding they would help to form public opinion. Unquestionably this annual meeting would stimulate in the various States a desire to elect abler and stronger men as Governors, to the end that they might be worthily represented in the conspicuous annual council.

The House of Governors seems to be a needed supplement to the Federal and State system. It could interfere with the prerogatives and functions neither of the Government at Washington nor with that of the States. The Constitution declares that "the powers not delegated to the States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively or to the people." The States are privileged, of course, to act individually for the regulation of their own internal affairs. There is no prohibition upon a voluntary attempt to act by agreement and understanding for the regulation of matters of common concern. In fact, subjects of legislation seem to be divided naturally into three classes—those within the power of Congress, those within the power of the States individually, of purely local concern, and, third, those that, while within the power of the States, nevertheless are of such a nature as to make it desirable that regulating laws should be uniform throughout the Union. In this sense Mr. JORDAN's House of Governors would meet a need for which no provision now exists, and which ought to be met. His plan responds perfectly to Mr. ROOT's admonition. It would be a protective measure, safeguarding the rights of the States against recent powerful centralizing tendencies, and preserving the balance of American institutions, as they were established by the Founders, upon a plan so wise and provident that it is "applicable to every stage of our National existence."

A TEST OF PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

On the face of the returns the anti-gambling sentiment in Niagara and Orleans Counties seems not so strong as there had been reason to expect. A little examination of the conditions in the district will give quite another impression.

Let us look at the facts first, and then at the explanation and the real meaning of them. The vote was light. In 1906 there had been in round numbers 24,000 votes cast. On Tuesday there were but few over 15,000. Practically two out of five of the voters did not go to the polls. Of the stay-at-homes there were more Republicans than Democrats, 4,345 to 3,843. The Republican plurality was cut from 750 to 248. Curiously enough this seems to have been almost exactly the falling off in the Prohibition vote, so that it is open to argument that the Prohibitionists actually saved the day for Mr. WALLACE. Under ordinary circumstances these results would be explained by general apathy and indifference to the issue involved.

In reality they are proof of an extraordinary interest in the issue and of a sentiment which politicians must surely reckon with. For the wonder is, not that the advocate of the Governor's anti-gambling policy got so few votes and was elected by so small a plurality, but that he got so many and that he was elected at all. He was confronted by all the customary agencies for getting out the party vote against him. The Republican machine was not merely indifferent, it was secretly hostile. The only organization, supplied with funds and actuated by party zeal that was active in the canvass was on the side of his opponent. The gamblers and their backers were engaged in seeking his defeat; they were experienced and capable and energetic politicians, and they were masters of all the open or underhand methods of the trade. In this case they could not use most of the open methods; they could not hold meetings or discuss the issue in public, for there was absolutely no argument they could use directly without offending the moral sense of the community. But they could and did use all the arts in which they are expert to defeat the Republican candidate.

On the other hand the Governor's policy and the candidate representing it were sustained only by discussion. The appeal was made to the conscience and the intelligence of the voters. Partisanship could not be aroused, for the issue was not broadly a partisan one, and the regular party leaders did not lift a hand for their assumed candidate, save very feebly at the last moment when it was too late to do more than try to "save their face." The Governor spent forty-eight hours in the district, and made some half-dozen speeches to meetings not remarkably large but enthusiastic. This, with the agitation from the pulpit, was about all there was to arouse the interest of the people. It was about all, but it was not all. One other force there was. It was the moral sense of the individual voter reflecting on the facts that had been unfolded in the course of the Governor's anti-gambling campaign of the Winter. And that force really carried the day.

There is one class that is not in the least danger of misinterpreting or underestimating the importance of this fact. That is the professional politicians. They know clearly what it means to-day, and what it may come to mean next November. Mr. PARSONS, the Republican leader in this county, had the sense to see and the courage to declare its significance ten days ago. It was too late to save the reputation of the machine in the actual election. But it was in time to prepare the mind of the party for action before the special session is over. Plainly Gov. HUGHES to-day is a force with which the old managers have to reckon. A man who can carry three-fifths of the party with him in a by-election especially arranged to leave him discredited, and who can do this on an issue purely one of morality and decency, as to which he has no personal interest to serve, cannot longer be opposed recklessly, or even silently ignored.

GET OUT OF THE DUMPS.

That part of Wall Street which takes short views offers the most attractive field in the United States for missionary work by the Sunshine Society. The exports of domestic products for April declined $20,325,117 compared with last year, and $11,000,000 compared with March. The unprecedented export of domestic products in January of $128,000,000 has shrunk to a mere $55,000,000. Is it to be wondered at that exports of gold have been resumed, and what hope can there be for prosperity with the country's liquid resources being drained away at a rate which made even the Bank of France wince when the Bank of England asked a smaller accommodation?

Those who like that line of reasoning may be left to the enjoyment of despair. For those who take longer views there is another line of thought available. The exports of April were small, as they are accustomed to be, shipments naturally decreasing with the exhaustion of stocks. The April shipments this year were smaller than usual for the obvious reason that the earlier shipments were unprecedented. The fiscal year's total of exports of this class of goods was a trifle of $845,446,504. To appreciate those figures it is necessary to recall the exultation which greeted a smaller total last year, that then being the high-water mark. In other words, those who take short views are lamenting because the United States is approximately sold out. The goods not only have been delivered—they have been paid for. They have also been consumed. This brings into view a future demand which cannot be supplied from any other source. Those who wish may be left to wallow in the slough of despond because at this midseason we are between good times past and good times ahead.

This partial view considers only our credits against the world. Happily the outlook on the side of our debits is even more encouraging. The Treasury's figures are not available, but the imports up to April 27 at New York are officially stated at $208,861,397, as compared with $312,992,459 last year. Our bills payable abroad are smaller than last year by some uncertain excess above the reduction in our purchases through New York alone, added to the increase of our sales, or collectibles, as stated above. April began with an excess of exports of $567,000,000, and it is certain that the current month has added to this unprecedented total. And this is not good enough for some people.

Then why should we be exporting gold? It may reasonably be because we have an overstock, and that we, therefore, undervalue it for any other purpose than selling it to those who use it in ways for which we disqualify it. We place gold under legal disability as a basis of banking, and there are enlightened communities who prefer it to bonds for that use. Accordingly we are using paper money, and are sparing gold to those who will use it to ease their monetary situation, and thus place them in position to be our good customers when they must buy what we alone can sell. Gold goes out because there is a scant supply of exchange, corresponding to the smallness of our debits abroad. The vital question is not the price of exchange to-day, but upon the renewals of sixty-day or ninety-day bankers' long bills, that is to say, in the Fall when we are moving the crops. We are now establishing credits abroad with those who have stopped our credit, virtually lending money to our customers.

There is no law compelling anybody to take cheerful views, but there is a law penalizing those who are tardy in doing so. Within sixty days the farmers will begin to have a fresh stock of spending money. The gloom and the statistics of to-day will not fit that situation. The mystery of a stock market rising against the statistics of the moment is consistent with the supposition that some detect coming events sooner than others.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Allen Was the Very Last. Of course New York still has, and is likely always to have, bad men in more than sufficient numbers, but with the death of THE ALLEN there passes away one who was, so far as we know, the very last representative of a once well-known type here—the Bad Man by avowed profession, recognized and in a sense respected as such, openly defiant of the law, and year after year conducting a "place" of almost National notoriety as a resort of the vicious and a public exhibition of criminals and crime.

Less than twenty years ago such men and places were to be counted here by at least a dozen. Perhaps HARRY HILL and his dance hall were the best known, the far from the worst of them, and there were others scattered over the town with names perfectly familiar to New Yorkers and all their visitors, which meant no small part of the country's whole population. Most of these men dated from just after the war, and while they were at the height of their by no means inconsiderable power, nobody, and least of all the police, thought of their suppression as possible.

One by one, however, they have disappeared, and the vacancy that each left remained unfilled. Some of these spacious ruffians died violent deaths and others peacefully; a few went to prison and at least one saw the error of his ways and not only reformed himself but devoted his abilities to the reformation of others. Most of them made much money in their day, but rarely indeed enough to last them through. As a rule they were men not altogether evil, and their success was largely due to the possession of certain likable qualities, including a rough kindliness and generosity, carefully restricted, of course, to cases where self-interest was not involved, but still real after its fashion.

THE ALLEN, who endured longest and hung on to his money most firmly, never really counted among the aristocrats of his class. His business instincts were far too well developed for that, and his record was rather for the exploiting of squalid vice than as a bold practitioner of desperate crime, but he, too, had his human and humane moments, and there are those to whom his death will mean the end of unadvertised charity.

Now his kind are all gone. There are still resorts for the vicious and the vacuous, but they are different from the old ones. While morals may not have improved appreciably, manners certainly have bettered. Low dives can no longer attain wide fame or attract general interest and toleration, and elsewhere vice usually pays to virtue the not insignificant compliment of fairly good behavior, fairly well maintained while in the public view. The saloons are fighting for their lives, now, instead of controlling politics and Municipal Governments—and the police. Just as Brother JASPER said, "It do move!"

City Boys for the Country. On general principles it is not a good thing for boys whose brains are worked as hard as the modern public school works them to devote their Summer vacations to farm labor, which is especially severe on unaccustomed muscles. School vacations are not designed to supply opportunities for earning money, but to provide periods of needed rest, and if conditions were ideal every student would so use his probably too scanty leisure.

Conditions are some distance from the ideal, however, and, as many city boys simply cannot spend their vacations in the play that is rest, it is presumably well that the State Agricultural Commission is executing a systematic plan under which their boys are at least saved the cruelest labor of all, which is that of looking for employment where every place has a hundred seekers, while by it the farmer, ever complaining at the scarcity of help in his busy season, is provided with the hands to whom he is supposed to be willing to pay good wages.

Both boys and farmers are said to have been pleased with the commission's experiment as tried last year on a small scale, and certainly work on a farm during the Summer months is more like a vacation than work in a shop or office would be. It is at least a change of scene, with good air to breathe in the daytime—as much cannot be said for the sleeping rooms of the average farmhouse—and lack of skill will probably prevent the performance, if not the imposition, of tasks unduly onerous.

Many of the "chores" which to the real country boy are of a deadly and discouraging tedium, will for a while be fun for his urban cousin, and nothing so lightens toil as novelty and interest. Some of us doubt the inevitable and invariable superiority of country to city life, even for children, but the country certainly has its advantages for those who have a chance to utilize them and know how to do it.

Sufferers Who Get No Sympathy. Down in the dark tobacco sections of Kentucky a vast amount of indignation has been excited recently by the presence of the State troops, and from the words used in expressing it, one might suppose that, instead of suppressing arson, murder, and theft, the soldiers were preventing the exercise by a free people of their natural rights. One Sheriff has even gone so far as to advise that any militiaman who interferes with anybody's "liberty" be "shot like a dog," and there is much angry talk about draining the State's resources, the insult to citizens which lies in the presence among them of an armed force, the useless provocation of anger, and the intrusion on privacy.

All this reminds that particularly clear-headed and sound-thinking paper, The Richmond News Leader, of the denunciations heaped by labor agitators of a certain too familiar class when troops are called out to protect life and property from rioters, and it calmly tells the "night riders" and their sensitive friends that the "liberty" they want, and infringement of which they so bitterly resent, is opportunity to exercise without interference > the sacred privilege of burning barns and dwellings, destroying tobacco beds, setting towns and warehouses afire, and whipping and killing men and women who refuse to obey the orders of the Tobacco Growers' Association, and persist in trying to assert their rights as American citizens to grow what they please on their own land and by their own labor, and to sell their product according as their own opinions and desires suggest. The Tobacco Growers' Association idea of personal liberty is the liberty to terrorize, destroy, and kill for the enforcement of its notions, and to prevent the personal liberty of its neighbors.

That seems to be an accurate as well as a vigorous presentation of the case, and one can without much danger of mistake join The News Leader in the opinion that the situation is one of those in which "stern enforcement of martial law, some liberal doses of imprisonment, and even a little judicious hanging, are necessary to restore reason and bring about an appreciation of the realities of justice, liberty, and a republican form of government."

HORACE MANN SCHOOL.

Parent Commends Mr. Prettyman's Work for the Boys and Girls.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos the recent discussion of the Principal's action relating to matters of dress of the girls in the high school department it seems only fair to Mr. Prettyman that the public should know something about him, what prompts him in making these radical changes, &c., and I think just one action of his through the passing Winter will suffice, and this, I believe, is not known outside of the school.

Early in the Winter it was discovered that almost every Saturday afternoon and very often Wednesdays also were spent by both boys and girls of Horace Mann High School at matinee. Some theatrical performance was "seen, marked learned, and inwardly digested," often to the neglect of their studies.

Like many others who are deeply interested in the culture and wholesome intellectual and physical development of the youth of this great city, the Principal of Horace Mann High School felt this was not desirable, not only because we seldom have more than two or three plays through the season that are really elevating, with quantities, especially in vaudeville, that are entirely objectionable for this impressionable age, but also that good healthy physical exercise is so much more desirable.

Here was a difficult problem, for it affected something out of school hours, something, too, for which he was not responsible, nor even supposed to know about, of a very attractive nature, and following a season in the country, quite "the thing to do." Obviously the only remedy lay in supplying a greater attraction. Now all boys are fond of athletics, and like to engage in games of skill and tests of strength, so the splendid gymnasium and swimming pool, the finest in the city, offered a happy solution. This might be thrown open to the boys of the high school every Saturday afternoon, but meant a heavy expense, as a corps of assistants must be on hand to take charge of the different games and exercises.

This, however, was done, without extra charge, and Mr. Prettyman has given up every Saturday afternoon, and with several assistants, men equally interested in the welfare of his boys, has joined in their games, played basket ball, handball, and other games, arranged matches with other schools, swam and dived, and even been "ducked," "without having a 'grouch' on the fellow afterward," in the pool, and in this way has provided healthy, happy Saturdays to a crowd of boys right up to the Easter vacation.

This, of course, affected only the boys; but I believe the girls are to have walking and skating clubs, &c., next year. It seems to me that a man who is willing to give so much of himself, freely, to the boys intrusted to his care, must be above criticism, and can be trusted to act only for the best interests of all his pupils.

The girls of Horace Mann are cultured and refined to an unusual degree, and, with a few exceptions, dress with good taste and simplicity; as a "mother" of four years' standing I know these dear girls, a great many of them, and they are intelligent, simple, and charming, and I feel the public ought to know this side of the story. ONE OF THE "MOTHERS."

STILL SKEPTICAL.

Writer of "Owning and Renting" Letter Makes Distinctions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article in this morning's edition of THE TIMES, headed "Owning and Renting," you say that in my statement published May 9 I have forgotten the probable increase in the value of the land. It seems to me that you also have forgotten something, i. e., the certain decrease in the value of the building. I assumed that one would offset the other, but if anything the depreciation of the value of the house will probably be greater than the increase in the value of the land in the given time. In reply to the letter signed by "Porchfiend," which is "long" on humor and "short" on facts, I would like to add a few remarks. He states that a $27.50 flat is a hovel. The foolishness, not to say falsity, of this statement is so apparent to any flat dweller that it requires no argument to dispute it.

Secondly, he says that he is paying $50 per month for seven very small rooms. "Porchfiend" must live on the lower east side, where people pay rents out of all proportion to the accommodations they receive. I would inform him that $50 per month rents a whole house in a nice neighborhood in either the Bronx or Brooklyn. I am further confirmed in the east side theory when I consider his remark concerning tenement house gossips, mixed ale parties, &c.

If "Porchfiend" will extend his horizon a little and take a look at the beautiful five and six-room apartments in the Bronx, containing every modern improvement, that rent from $20 to $35, he will realize how foolish his letter sounds.

Furthermore, any one having any idea of building values can readily realize what sort of home a real estate speculator will build for $2,500, to be paid for on the installment plan. I might be convinced if I saw the plan and specifications of "Porchfiend's" home, but in the meantime I am still a skeptic.

New York, May 12, 1908. E. M. B.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The figures submitted by your correspondent "E. M. B." as an argument against home owning are misleading. Comparison is made between homes of values differing as 2 to 1, on the assumption that the values are equal. A house and lot worth $5,000 will rent for about $40 a month, and adding the extra carfares of $40 a year makes a comparative rental value of $43. It is well known that costly transportation diminishes selling values, as it must be considered as a fixed charge by a buyer.

The rented home taken for comparison is given a rental value of $27.50, including heat, and deducting the fuel cost, which your correspondent charges against the owned home, reduces the rent to $24. No wonder that buying a home is made to seem a costly process when the calculation is based upon a bought home worth $43 a month rent as against a rented home worth $24. The "result" of figuring upon such differing values proves nothing—except the deceptiveness of improperly presented figures.

The attempt to prove an argument by comparing as absolutes factors of different values is a failing from which even professional statisticians are not exempt, and leads to errors that have done much to bring "statistics" into disrepute.

The relative cost of buying and renting is really a small matter in deciding as to the wisdom of home owning. The disadvantages of purchase are chiefly the inability to leave for employment elsewhere without a loss; the tying up of business capital, and the assuming of a heavier fixed charge for some years. Many persons are so situated that it is more profitable for them to rent. Others will find it better, financially, to purchase. Other things being equal, the man who buys a home will be somewhat better off at the end of ten years than a renter. But care should be taken not to assume too heavy payments.

House Owner's Saving.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the figures submitted by "E. M. B." appear to be on a fair basis, I cannot understand the conclusion arrived at that no benefit accrues until the expiration of twenty-six years.

According to the figures, the house owner has saved $4,000 in thirteen years, and assuming that his wage earning capacity is fully as good at the end of the period, there seems no reason why he should not save more than $4,000 during the succeeding thirteen years. A. W. T.

The Debtor Gains.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Home building is worth while and for these reasons: Voluntary savings seldom accumulate much before calls are made upon them, and the temptation to withdraw the little hoard in whole or in part is frequently irresistible. Compulsory savings, by which I mean an amount that one is compelled to lay aside each month to meet interest and payments on principal, soon accomplish wonders; in a few years a big hole is eaten into the debt, and the borrower begins to see daylight, and has in hand a house and lot that he probably would never have had otherwise. Cost of a Jersey House.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "E. M. B.," figures on a 6 per cent. mortgage. Not one house in a hundred is sold on more than 5 per cent. A house equal to a $27.50 apartment can be purchased in New Jersey within forty minutes of New York for $3,250 to $3,500. This with a plot of ground, 50 by 200 or thereabout, which is certainly "worth while." N. G. VREELAND.

Desertion and Divorce.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

New York is one of only two States in the Union in which desertion is not a cause of divorce. There is no more important matter than the unfortunate position of a large number of women who are deserted by their legal protectors and still held by the law to a life of misery and pecuniary suffering. New Jersey has followed the suggestions of the Washington convention on a universal law on divorce matters, while our State has ignored it in its political dissensions.

It is no small matter to a large number of worthy women. JUSTICE.

MY MELODRAMA.

Oh, make my villain fierce and cold,
To rouse up all my hate;
And make my hero brave and bold,
Content to serve—and wait;
And make my heroine so fair,
So lovable and sweet
That I shall want to go up there,
And throw me at her feet.

Point all my daggers needle-fine,
Make papa weak and old;
The powder mill—the stolen mine—
Ah, me, what thrills they hold!
The farm, the mortgage—put them in,
The grief so wet and wild,
The rifled safe—the hidden sin,
And—more than all—the chee-ild!

Oh, put them in and stir them well,
Let tides of evil flow;
Let imps of mischief cast a spell,
And whittle out some snow
In flakes whose least diameter
Is half an inch or more,
Till it quite wholly covers her,
And litters up the floor.

Last act—a shackled villain in
His striped garb—a wreck!
The hero with the heroine
In tears about his neck.
Triumphant virtue—wrong o'erthrown,
My fretted soul now still,
So let me in the pit alone
To thrill and thrill and thrill!

WOMEN START LEAGUE AGAINST SUFFRAGISTS

Organization Aims to Instruct the Sex as to Its True Political and Social Position.

A CAMPAIGN OF SPEECHES

Meetings to be Held Next Winter at Which Prominent Educators Will Discuss Woman's Future.

At the home of Mrs. Gilbert E. Jones, 222 Madison Avenue, an active campaign was started yesterday against those who have been crying aloud for woman suffrage. The League for the Civic Education of Women, which is affiliated with the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, met there and laid out work for the season of 1908-1909. Mrs. Jones presided at the meeting. These officers were elected:

Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, President; Miss Eleanor Hewitt, Mrs. William Putnam, and Mrs. Samuel Untermyer, Vice Presidents; Mrs. Gilbert E. Jones, Mrs. Fritz Achelis, Mrs. F. S. Bangs, Miss Elizabeth Cockroft, Mrs. Emil Hulchling, Mrs. John A. Church, Mrs. Barclay Hazard, Mrs. Julian Heath, Mrs. Rossiter Johnson, and Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, Directors.

The league was formed, as its prospectus says, "for the purpose of giving the women of the State the best possible means of obtaining information bearing on their rights, responsibilities, and economic position in the community. Its object will be to make clear the reasons urged against the Woman Suffragists' movement by those actively opposing it, and to endeavor to get from the silent woman an expression of her opinion, the importance of which can scarcely be overestimated. It hopes to give the most ample means for education and enlightenment on all questions affecting the political, economic, and social position of women."

The league starts with an executive staff and equipment sufficient to make it loom up next Fall as a powerful antagonist to the suffragists. Mrs. Jones said after the meeting that next season there would be two courses of lectures, one at the Berkeley Lyceum and another at Cooper Union. Two members of the Cabinet of President Roosevelt, a number of United States Senators and members of the Federal and State Judiciary, will be among the lecturers. Professors from the faculties of the more important universities of the country will also be heard in discussion of the rights of women.

The membership of the league is in five divisions. The sustaining members will pay a fee of $25 a year, associate members $3 a year, and other members $1 a year. A special membership is provided for teachers and those engaged in philanthropic work, and the fee for this membership will be 50 cents a year.

Mrs. Jones has given the basement of her home as an office for the league. An information bureau will be maintained here until June 20, when it will close, to be reopened Sept. 15.

It was explained yesterday that the chief aim of the league was to disseminate the truth among those who might be inclined to hearken too eagerly to the arguments of women suffragists who might not stick too closely to facts. Educating women in civic matters and helping them tackle their problems fairly and without fanatical urgings is what it is hoped will be accomplished.

THINKS WELL OF OUR FOREIGN MATCHES

WE WORK TOO HARD HERE

Six Hours a Day, She Suggests, Ought to be Enough for American Men—Goes Back Liking "the States."

The Marquis and Marchioness of Headfort sailed yesterday on the Mauretania, both somewhat unnerved as a result of a railroad accident near Winnipeg last Friday. A spread rail overturned their train on their journey from California. The Marchioness sprained her shoulder, and it was with an effort that she attended the dinner given on Tuesday night by Peter F. Collier in her honor.

Before her departure yesterday the Marchioness discussed international marriages, American society, and a new labor theory, which she dubs "a six-hour work day." She said:

"I dare say all your visitors say they like America, whether they really do or not. When I say that I have enjoyed my visit greatly I am speaking the truth.

"I like American women better than American men. I was astonished to go to a luncheon where there were only women. In England we always have men to talk to three times a day, and at first I did not fancy the innovation, because it is so much easier to talk to men. But I found it was rather cheery being with women, and of course the women here are so refreshing and different. The type has an individuality that explains the success of American women in foreign society. But I did not see many men.

"I think both the English and American men might revise their modes of life. The Englishman doesn't work enough and becomes one-sided; the American works too much. He does not take enough time to enjoy himself, and that, too, is a mistake. Why can't they strike a happy medium. Six hours a day is quite long enough for a man to work. Then he has a chance to develop the mental and social sides.

"I dare say this unceasing toil has brought about the prodigious success of this Nation. Very well, then, it is quite time, now that America is so very rich, for the workers to relax a bit. I hear there is a tendency in this direction, but to an Englishwoman, it seems that the American is all work.

"The combination of English and American is especially happy. I am enthusiastic on the subject of international marriages. I believe the Americans do not care to see their heiresses marry foreigners, but isn't that a bit selfish? America has lots of money and can easily spare the millions. I know so many American wives of Englishmen who are absolutely happy, but of course they are the persons one never hears of. The children of these unions seem a high type physically and intellectually, and one should work a bit for posterity.

"In England, the closest kinship between the two countries is recognized. The brotherhood of the two lands has been emphasized often and the English look upon Americans with genuine appreciation and affection."

WEDS PRESIDENT'S COUSIN.

Miss Mary Willis Becomes the Bride of James Alfred Roosevelt.

The marriage of James Alfred Roosevelt, a son of Mrs. T. James Bowlker of Boston, and her first husband, the late James A. Roosevelt, and Miss Mary C. Willis, a daughter of Mrs. Charles E. Willis of New York, took place at noon yesterday in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street.

The Rev. W. Montague Geer, vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, and the Rev. Spence Burton of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Boston, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Pierre Willis, wore a gown of corn-colored liberty satin and Venetian lace, topped by a gray plumed gray hat, and wore gardenias on her corsage. Percival Lowell of Boston was best man. There were no other attendants. Intimate friends and members of the two families only witnessed the ceremony, and there was no reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are at the Hotel Belmont, where they will live for the present. Mr. Roosevelt is a brother of Miss Katharine Roosevelt, and a cousin of the President. The bride and her mother have lived at the Woman's Club in East Forty-sixth Street for several months.

WON'T HOLD MAURETANIA.

Liner Sailed Despite Broken Propeller—Will Repair on the Other Side.

The Cunard liner Mauretania sailed for Liverpool yesterday still without a blade of her outer port propeller, which she lost by hitting submerged wreckage on her way across. On her arrival on the other side she will be put in dry dock for repairs.

It is expected that she will lose a day repairing and that she will get back to the Liverpool landing stage on Saturday. She will sail on Sunday, a day late. Her crew believe that her next trip to this port will be an attempt to smash all records and that the day lost in sailing will be made up so that she will arrive here on regular schedule time.

Mrs. Marie Bates, the actress, was a passenger. Sailing with her were Mrs. Charles B. Hogg and Miss Marian Force. They are on a pleasure tour which will extend from Ireland to Tangiers.

W. H. CRANE IS READY TO QUIT THE STAGE

Says He'll Never Create Another Rôle, Though He May Appear in Some Old Ones.

HE IS SIXTY-THREE NOW

And Not So Strong as Folks Who See Him in the Footlights' Glare Might Think.

William H. Crane, the veteran actor, who is now appearing in "Father and the Boys" at the Empire Theatre, has announced to many of his friends in the last few days that he has determined never to "create" another rôle. As Mr. Crane is one of the few old-time stars still in harness, his retirement will be of more than usual importance both to the public and to theatrical people. Last night he reiterated the assertion, which many people heretofore have refused to credit.

Mr. Crane proposes to play all next season in his present piece, which is to reopen at the Empire late in August after the Summer vacation. Then he proposes to rest, though he may be seen in an occasional revival or on some special programme.

Mr. Crane is now 63 years old, and by no means so strong a man as those who see him only in the theatre might imagine. For a long time he has suffered with acute stomach trouble, which is always accentuated by strain or nervousness. He finds the ordeals of first nights in New York especially trying. Moreover, Mr. Crane, though all of his productions have not been such successes as the George Ade farce, has saved a considerable fortune, so that he is not confronted with any of the problems common to less provident players. He has a Summer home at Cohasset, and it is there that he best likes to stay. This Summer, however, he will go abroad with his wife.

Mr. Crane made his first appearance on the stage in Utica, N. Y., in 1863, in "The Daughter of the Regiment" as a member of the Harriet Holman Company, in which he served his apprenticeship and with which he remained for eight years. In later years he formed a partnership with Stuart Robson and made a series of productions famous in American theatrical annals. The performance of Robson and Crane in "The Two Dromios" will never be forgotten. Mr. Robson and Mr. Crane separated in 1889, and since that time Mr. Crane has devoted himself almost entirely to the production of American plays, though he has also appeared in some revivals and adaptations from such foreign works as "Business is Business." "Father and the Boys" is the first marked success he has enjoyed since "David Harum."

CHANGES AT METROPOLITAN.

Two Choruses, Two Orchestras, New Operas, and Change of Pit.

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, conferred with the Directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company yesterday, when the plans for the next opera season were discussed.

The most important reform which has been instituted by the new management will be the engagement of two choruses and two orchestras. The Italian chorus will number 100, and each member will be selected by Mr. Gatti-Casazza, with the aid of Mr. Toscanini. The German chorus will also number 100, and will be engaged by Mr. Dippel, who will be guided by the advice of Mr. Mahler and Mr. Hertz. The Italian chorus will be under the direction of Signor Setti, chorus master of La Scala for several years. Mr. Dippel has engaged a chorus master from the Munich Opera House for the German contingent.

The engagement of two orchestras for next season has been made necessary by the number of performances that will be given by the Metropolitan Opera Company, not only in New York, but in Philadelphia and Brooklyn. One of the orchestras will consist of 90 men and the other of 60. The orchestra pit of the Metropolitan Opera House will be enlarged, so that the regular orchestra may be increased when special performances are given. It is also the intention of the management to give a series of symphonic concerts with the combined orchestras under the direction of Mr. Mahler and Mr. Toscanini.

The operas for next season will be selected from a list that includes D'Albert's "Tiefland," Catalani's "La Valli," Smetana's "Die verkaufte Braut," Goldmark's "Das Heimchen am Herd," Puccini's "Le Villi," Dupont's "Cabrera," Bruneau's "L'Attague du Moulin," Tschaikowsky's "Pique-Dame," and Lapara's "Habanera." The revivals will include Verdi's "Otello," Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro," and Massenet's "Nanon." All the scenery for the new Italian and French operas will be designed and painted in Milan and Paris. The scenery for the German works will be executed by artists in Vienna and Berlin.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza is now studying a plan that will enable him to raise or lower the orchestra pit. This will make it possible to have a sunken orchestra for the more polyphonic works in the repertory, while the musicians will be on a level with the orchestra stalls when they interpret the lighter Italian operas. The conductors will be M. H. Hertz, Mahler, Toscanini, and a young Italian director whose engagement will be announced later.

Friars Have Their Festival To-day.

The first annual festival of the Friars for the purpose of raising funds for the new clubhouse in West Forty-fifth Street will take place this afternoon at the New York Theatre. The star offering of the bill will be the first reunion of Weber and Fields since their separation in their old vaudeville act, "The German Senators." Many others will contribute, and the Friars will give a special concluding number.

Walter's Plays Going to London.

Eugene Walter, author of "Paid in Full" and "The Wolf," confirmed a report last night that the latter play, as well as the former, is to be produced in London. "The Wolf" will be produced within a few weeks at the Shaftesbury Theatre. "Paid in Full," as already announced, will not be put on until next season.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

George M. Robinson sails on the Baltic to-day to arrange for the concert appearance in London and Paris of Miss Clara Clemens, the contralto, daughter of Mark Twain, and Miss Marie Nichols, violinist, who will sail Saturday on the Caronia.

Mme. Cecile Chaminade, the French pianist-composer, has been engaged for a tour of America next Fall, it was announced yesterday. She will make her first New York appearance at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 24. The programme will consist entirely of her own compositions.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Beginning with yesterday's matinee Shubert & Anderson started a series of afternoon parties for orphans at the Hippodrome. From 700 to 1,000 seats will be given up to the children. The Hippodrome will close a week from Saturday.

Edna Archer Crawford, has been engaged by Henry B. Harris for the leading feminine role in one of his new Autumn productions.

A theatre party of 250 Southerners saw "The Clansman" at the Academy of Music last night. Capt. Joseph L. Peary, founder of the Ku Klux Klan, was said to be among them.

The two hundred and seventy-fifth consecutive performance of "The Merry Widow" at the New Amsterdam Theatre will be celebrated on June 13 by the distribution of "Merry Widow" hats to the women in the audience.

David Warfield will sail to-day on the Hamburg for Naples. Later he will meet David Belasco to complete arrangements for his London season.

A report that Julia Marlowe and John Drew were to star together in Shakespearean productions next Autumn under the management of Charles Frohman was denied last night by both the Frohman and Shubert managements. J. J. Shubert said that, if Miss Marlowe played at all, she would play under the direction of the Shuberts.

LETTERS TO THE 'LOBBY KING.'

Written by Russell Sage, J. P. Morgan, and Others to Samuel Ward.

Autograph letters from the correspondence of the late Samuel Ward, traveler, linguist, miner, banker, diplomatist, and poet, who for years was known in Washington as the "King of the Lobby," but who was better known as "Uncle Sam Ward," will be auctioned off at Anderson's to-morrow. Mr. Ward, who was descended from Richard Ward, Colonial Governor of Rhode Island, died at Pegli, Italy, in 1884.

Among the letters are four written to him by the late Russell Sage. One, headed "New York, Sunday Evening," but no date, says that Mr. Sage hears that some public lands are to be awarded, and he asks Mr. Ward to have the matter delayed so that "we may present our claims for a portion of the land." In another letter, dated June 10, 1878, Mr. Sage informs Mr. Ward that he has bought 200 shares for Mr. Ward's account, and adds: "It is all right, in my opinion, for a profit." In the third letter Mr. Sage addresses Mr. Ward as "Dear Uncle Sam," and makes a business appointment to meet in "G. House" at "6½ o'clock." In the fourth letter Mr. Sage speaks of a pool in "K. P.," of which "Jay Gould has the full management." He tells Mr. Ward that he is willing to have James R. Keene share, and adds: "I will buy 5,000 Denver extension bonds to-day for your account, and at my risk as to loss. If they drop off, as they ought to, I will take 10,000 * * * The prospect for a quick turn is favorable, and I need not assure you how glad I would be to make it for you."

There are two letters of J. Pierpont Morgan to Mr. Ward. In one he acknowledges the receipt of a present of fruit, of which Mr. Morgan wrote: "It was really superb. I have never seen anything like it." In the other letter, dated New York, Dc. 28, 1878, Mr. Morgan declines to sell "Louisiana Consols" on a discretionary order and asks for definite information.

There is an unusually long and interesting letter from Mme. Blavatsky, the theosophist, to Mr. Ward. It is dated "Editor's Office of The Theosophist, Bombay, Jan. 31, 1882." She tells Mr. Ward that he is wasting his talents for "even one solitary moment singing Delmonico's shortcomings in the world," and says that she is content to preach the truth to a few earnest souls instead of to a multitude of merely fashionable curiosity seekers. She goes on to say: "If we were to set up a miracle shop, and made the chandelier detach itself and float around the room, while unseen hands turned ghostly hurdy-gurdys, or made ephemeral footmen serve pipes and coffee to the awe-struck guests; and, the séance over, sent each one away with a chromo representing the amourettes of our Rev. friend H. W. Beecher—comme souvenir—then surely we would have a rush."

There are a number of letters from Oscar Wilde to Mr. Ward, mostly signed "Oscar." In one Wilde says: "Your idea of a dinner to Mrs. Langtry is charming, but then everything you do, from poetry to menus, is perfect. You are the great authority on lyrics and Lafitte." And in another letter Wilde says: "My dear Uncle Sam: The Lily is very anxious to see you. Suppose that we have a luncheon on Sunday, not a dinner, for her."

Among the other letters are one from President Chester A. Arthur about the shooting of President Garfield; a letter from Earl Dunraven, "Monte Carlo, Nov. 2," no year: "Egyptians are pretty good kind of people to fight. If I have to fight any people I want to fight Egyptians," and, from Jacob Lorillard, "New York, March 5, 1879: I have been looking into the project for building an iron pier at Coney Island, and think it is a bonanza for 100 to 140 per cent. per year."

ROMAN COLLEGE ALUMNI MEET

Diamond and Amethyst Ring Presented to Bishop O'Connell.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting and dinner of the Alumni Association of the American College at Rome brought to the Hotel Savoy yesterday afternoon a gathering of Catholic prelates and priests who paid special honor to Bishop D. J. O'Connell, rector of the Catholic University at Washington.

Bishop O'Connell was promoted to a bishopric last week. His elevation was a recognition from the Pope for his work in Washington. The members of the Alumni included many of the Bishop's old students when he was rector of the American College at Rome. Bishop O'Connell was presented with a diamond and amethyst episcopal ring. The toast, "The Holy Father," was drunk standing, and was responded to by Diomede Falconio, Apostolic Delegate to this country. Archbishop Farley, Dr. Henry A. Brann of St. Agnes's Church, and others spoke.

The officers for the ensuing year elected at the meeting preceding the dinner were: Father F. H. Wall of the Holy Rosary Church, President; Father George A. Dougherty of Wahsington, Vice President; Father Patrick McGee of New York, Treasurer, and Father John J. O'Brien of this city, Secretary. The Executive Committee consists of Mgr. W. J. Murphy of New York, Mgr. Thomas Lynch of Troy, and Father Dennis Driscoll of New York.

METHODISTS HEAR BISHOPS.

Reports on Africa and Work in Japan—Discuss Book Plans.

BALTIMORE, May 13.—At the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to-day, Bishop Earl Cranston, resident Bishop of Washington, read his report on the union of the various Methodist Churches in Japan as the Methodist Church of Japan. Bishop I. B. Scott, the only colored Bishop, made his report of the work of the Church in Africa, especially in Liberia. A commission was appointed to consider means of increasing the salaries of the pastors.

A flurry about the book concerns was caused by the introduction of a motion by B. L. Paine of Nebraska, calling for a detailed account of the finances and business of the New York and Western publishing houses for each of the past twelve years.

In the preamble the resolution stated that the book depositories had been run at a loss for some years past. These statements aroused Dr. George P. Mains of the New York Book Concern, who stated that the book concerns had not been run at a loss. The question was referred to the Committee on Book Concerns.

An invitation was received from the American Peace Society to send two or more delegates to the seventeenth universal peace congress to be held in London, England, from July 27 to Aug. 1 of the present year.

It is planned to have the General Conference adjourn not later than May 29, so that the delegates may be free on Decoration Day.

MEDAL FOR A BOY HERO.

Humane Society Honors Arthur Cox for Saving a Drowning Girl.

Arthur J. Cox, the twelve-year-old son of Arthur M. Cox of 138 Henry Street, Brooklyn, has just received a medal and a certificate of honorable mention from the Humane Society of Massachusetts for saving a girl's life last August.

Mr. Cox with his family was at his Summer home near Gloucester, Mass. Near his house is the Bass River, which empties into the sea some 200 yards beyond. On Aug. 27 three servant girls, bathing in the river, were swept out into deep water.

Walter J. Byrne a life guard, came to the rescue, but could take out only two of the young women. Arthur Cox, who was not far away in a small boat, quickly rowed to where the third girl was going down for the last time. The little boy jumped in, caught her around the head with one arm, and held on to the boat with the other until Byrne got back.

The cottagers at the time made a fuss over young Cox, which so bored him that he took to the woods for a couple of days.

High School Boys in Mock Convention.

Two mock conventions representing the Democratic and Republican Parties will be held at the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, to-morrow to nominate candidates for the Presidency. Preliminary district conventions have been held and delegates elected to the "National" conventions. In some cases the delegates have been instructed.

At the "National" conventions, the organization, naming of candidates, balloting, and declaration of the nominees will follow the procedure of the real conventions of political parties.

ANGRY FLATBUSH AFTER SCHOOL BOARD

Glee Club Got the Use of a School When the Taxpayers' Association Didn't.

DEMAND THE REASON WHY

Board Authorizes President Winthrop to Send Such Explanation as He Can—$1,409,000 for New Schools.

The Flatbush Taxpayers' Association of Brooklyn is greatly incensed because the Board of Education denied it the use of Erasmus Hall and extended that privilege to the Flatbush Glee Club, which President P. S. Tilden of the association declares is an "outside organization altogether." President Tilden sent this letter to yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education through its Building Committee:

> Gentlemen: We wrote you recently asking permission to hold a meeting in Erasmus Hall, and explained fully the objects of our association, of whom it was composed, and received from you a letter stating briefly that this application was denied. Although you did not do us the courtesy to tell why the application was denied, we presumed it was owing to your avowed policy that the halls of the public school buildings would not be let for outside purposes.
>
> Our association, however, is very much surprised to learn that the hall was rented or given to the Flatbush Glee Club, which is an outside organization in every sense of the word, so far as we understand, to hold a concert on Thursday night, May 7.
>
> May we ask why permission was refused in our case and granted in the case of the Glee Club? We think we were certainly entitled to the preference, as we, as taxpayers, are paying the money that built the high school.
> Many of the members are very much incensed at the turn this case has taken, and while we do not under any consideration desire to make any threats, I feel certain that this matter will not end here. Our membership is composed of over 1,000 taxpayers, many of whom are prominent, as we stated before, in National, State, and city affairs, and, to use a slangy phrase, they feel "pretty hot" over the manner this application has been turned down in our case and granted in another, unless there is some reason why this should be that does not appear at the present time.

There was a disposition on the part of some members of the board to file the communication, but Gen. Wingate thought the association was entitled to an explanation, and his motion authorizing President Winthrop to reply to President Tilden as he saw proper was unanimously carried.

While the recommendations of the fire battalion chiefs that thirteen school buildings be closed "as unsafe and unfit for school purposes" and that precautions against fire be taken in more than 500 others did not come before the board, two echoes of them were heard.

The Committee on Buildings, which is directly responsible for the safety of school buildings, reported that "very careful consideration had been given to the matter of relieving congested conditions in certain localities and also doing away with school buildings which were either unfit for school purposes, or were so antiquated, so unsanitary, or so structurally arranged that their immediate replacement with new, up-to-date, fire-proof edifices was a matter of immediate necessity."

Without dissent the board adopted a resolution requesting the Board of Estimate to authorize $1,409,000 corporate stock for the erection of new elementary schools at Macdougal and Sullivan Streets and Twentieth Street and Ninth Avenue, and additions to schools at 519 West Forty-fourth Street, Keap and South Third Streets, Brooklyn, and dormitory buildings for the New York Parental School in Queens.

The second echo came in the form of a resolution from the Finance Committee setting aside various amounts to be expended by the Committee on Buildings in sums not exceeding $1,000.

The board adopted the report of the Committee on Buildings, finding Frank R. Rix, a music director, guilty of neglect of duty in connection with accepting old pianos as new, and recommending that he be fined twenty days' pay. Mr. Rix was acquitted of misconduct. Commissioner Dresser wanted to know why Rix was fined only twenty days' pay, when Caleb W. Cameron, convicted of the same charge, had been fined forty days' pay. Commissioner Everett replied that, while Mr. Rix might have been lazy or inattentive, there was no suspicion of moral obliquity on his part.

Again the board set its foot down on the use of school buildings for pay entertainments, no matter how worthy the case. This was in a Richmond case, where a building was wanted for an entertainment to raise money to buy clothes and shoes for poor school children. The petition was denied.

The Committee on Legislation reported a resolution, which was adopted, calling for a subcommittee of seven to "revise the schedules of salaries applicable to the members of the supervising and teaching staff." This will bring the question of equal pay for men and women in similar positions again before the board.

INSPECT SUMMER BOATS.

Government Officials Going Over the Excursion Fleet.

The local office of the Steamboat Inspection Service is at present busy with the task of going over the excursion fleet for the coming season. Yesterday most of the twenty-six inspectors were sent out to the different rendezvous of the boats. The Summer fleet, including the boats on regular river or harbor runs, number about forty craft, and most of the certificates under which they operate expire about this time.

Of late years there has been a great increase in the number of motorboats of 15 tons and under. In 1906 certificates were issued for 1,556 motorboats. It is estimated that there are now about 2,500 operating in this vicinity. The great demand for licenses is one of the results of the Treasury Department's campaign last Summer to see that the law was complied with.

The Inspectors are giving much attention to boat and fire drills. The latter cannot, of course, be passed upon until the boats are under commission and have steam up. Where there is an excellence shown in the drills the local Inspector of Hulls writes both to the owner and the skipper congratulating them. The record this season so far is five streams of water in operation in 1 minute and 35 seconds; one boat out in 40 seconds, and six boats swung clear and ready to lower in 1 minute and 45 seconds.

Gifts from Roosevelt and Morgan.

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the New York Society Library yesterday, gifts were received from J. Pierpont Morgan of the catalogue of his collection of miniatures, manuscripts, and early printed books, and "The Lives of the Lord Chancellors" in ten volumes was received from President Roosevelt. W. Emlen Roosevelt, Howard Townsend, and Bayard Tuckerman filled the vacancies in the Board of Trustees, caused by the death of Frederick Sheldon, G. V. N. Baldwin, and S. Franklin Stanton.

BAN ON FOREIGN ACTORS.

Union Here Won't Try to Organize Non-Resident Stage Folk.

It was announced yesterday at the annual convention of the Actors' National Protective Union in Union Hall, 8 Union Square, that the Chorus Singers' Union of the Metropolitan Opera House, which struck about two years ago for an increase in wages, having disbanded, the Actors' National Protective Union, which organized these singers, would not again attempt to organize unions made up either in whole or in part of non-residents.

Delegates from this city, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, and San Francisco attended the convention yesterday. The organization is made up principally of vaudeville actors, but has a number of unions of choristers, including the American Chorus Singers' Union, composed of the chorus of the Hippodrome.

The question of contracts for the theatrical season was discussed, but the wages to be demanded will not be agreed on, it was stated, until nearer the opening of the season. It was decided to make no demands at present for members employed in roof gardens and Summer resorts.

BISHOP HORSTMANN DEAD.

Had Been the Head of the Cleveland Diocese Since 1891.

CANTON, Ohio, May 13.—Bishop Ignatius F. Horstmann of the Catholic Diocese of Cleveland died to-night of a heart trouble which came upon him suddenly this morning, just after he had celebrated mass at St. John's Church in this city.

Upon his return to America he was appointed Professor of German and Hebrew in the Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, and held that post until 1877, when he assumed the rectorship at St. Mary's Church in Philadelphia, of which he was in charge until 1885, when he was made Chancellor of the archdiocese. He became a Bishop in 1891.

STICKNEY.—Extract from the minutes of a stated meeting of the Executive Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, held on the 8th day of May, 1908:

The Executive Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York records with deep sorrow the death on May 4, 1908, of Albert Stickney. The unique intimacy of his connection with the association seems to justify a special minute of his loss. Active in the founding of the association, self-sacrificing and indomitable in its great natal struggle against judicial corruption, resourceful in later councils of importance, fearless and tireless always for the right, he was a gallant and happy warrior in every contest in behalf of those professional and judicial ideals upon which the inspiration and best achievement of the association depend.

LEADERS AT HIGH RECORDS

Heavy Gold Engagements for Paris Fail to Affect Money Markets—Sharp Rise in Cotton.

Shortly after the opening of yesterday's stock market announcements of engagements of gold for shipment to Paris began to come to hand, and before the close of the day various banks and banking houses had taken some $5,750,000 for export. This brings the total of gold secured here for Paris up to $17,250,000, while in addition several millions have been taken by Canada. These withdrawals of gold came hard on the heels of the heavy payments to the Treasury on account of the recall of United States deposits, causing in all a loss of little less than $15,000,000 to the local banks within four business days. The stock market paid as little attention to this drain as did the money market, where rates were if anything easier than on Tuesday. On the Stock Exchange a complete recovery from Tuesday's declines occurred, and many of the active shares, including Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, and Great Northern, made new high prices for the year. There was practically no basis in the day's news for a resumption of the advance, but this has also been true of the rising markets of the past fortnight. Apparently a fugitive short interest supplied the substantial portion of the day's buying power. A maximum gain of nearly 8 points in Southern Pacific preferred followed the spread of a report that in connection with the financing considered by that company the right which it now has to retire its preferred stock at 115 would be canceled, and that additional money would be raised by further issues of such stock. The retirement privilege has always acted as a check on the stock in the neighborhood of the retiring price. An explanation for the recent strength of Southern Railway shares was forthcoming in the news that the road had sold to bankers $15,000,000 of notes secured by collateral, the notes themselves being convertible into this collateral. This fresh capital should go far toward making the path of the road easier, especially so now that the railroad agitation in the South is rapidly dying down. Other matters more or less interesting to financial markets included the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend upon the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific stocks, an advance in the price of copper metal on the local Metal Exchange, and the first unfavorable earnings statement of the Lackawanna Railroad, which for the March quarter reported its operation in New York State as resulting in a decrease of $349,000 in net. On the Cotton Exchange a sensational advance followed professional manipulation.

At the end of the day in the foreign exchange market demand sterling quotations were off only 5 points, in spite of the heavy gold engagements, and, as Paris still seeks gold in the London market and shipments thus far have had no effect upon money rates here, further exports are entirely possible. In their operations with the Government the banks continue to come out ahead. At the present rate of gain they will within ten days have entirely recovered the moneys turned into the Treasury to meet the deposit withdrawals.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT—Crop news was generally favorable yesterday, despite complaints of Hessian fly and excessive rain in the Southwest. Prices were irregular, with a downward trend all day. There was a livelier inquiry for export, but only about three loads could be confirmed. Sales were reported at Baltimore of new crop wheat for export at 6½c over Chicago, September, for July-August shipment. Northwest arrivals were 155 cars, against 325 cars last year, and a decrease of 325,000 bushels in the Minneapolis stock for four days was noted. Liverpool showed a decline of ⅜d on some months and ⅜d advance on others. Continental changes were featureless. Cash wheat in New York was quoted as follows: No. 2 red, $1.03 elevator, and $1.07 free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.17, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.14¼ free on board, afloat.

CORN—Prices ruled generally higher yesterday on further heavy rains in some of the leading States, although receipts at Chicago were a little over the estimates. It was rumored that fully 700,000 bushels of cash corn had been sold by a leading holder at a concession in price. Export demand was light, with sales of about one load reported. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted at 74¼c elevator, and 72½c asked, free on board, afloat.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Speculative Bond Queries.

Some brokerage houses report an improvement, in one respect at least, and that is in the inquiries from out-of-town customers with regard to special stocks and speculative bonds. They say that as a rule only a small percentage of the inquiries eventually resolves itself into actual business, and in all the letters or other communications received there is a pronounced note of uncertainty with regard to the market. It would appear that there is more or less general satisfaction with the advance in prices, but there is also an evident timidity, so far as buying stocks on margin is concerned. Some appear to believe that the market is being put up only for the distribution of stocks, while others assume that the betterment is really the reflection of the measure of conditions months hence. Many of the speculative bonds on the board are the subject of inquiry, and brokers report outside buying of that character. One broker said: "I do not know how the bond houses feel, but many of our clients appear to think that there is a possibility of profit in some of these speculative bonds, and they have been making purchases accordingly. On the other hand, I believe that they would sell them promptly if they showed a profit."

Value of Serial Bonds.

Discussing the various kinds of bonds yesterday a man who has a property against which bonds have recently been issued said he had made an interesting discovery concerning serial bonds. In arranging for the flotation of his bonds he was discussing with one house the general terms, and the suggestion was made to him that the bonds instead of being a straight 40-year issue should be a serial, part maturing yearly after the end of the sixth year. He declined to issue such a bond, but in talking with another bond man it was pointed out to him that these serial bond issues were a good thing for the selling house. For example, where they sold bonds which would mature in seven years to one man, in eight years to another, in nine years to another, and so on, after a short time a permanent annual renewal business would be established, inasmuch as every time a block of bonds belonging to an investor matured and were paid off the house selling the bonds would know just when and to whom to submit securities it then had for sale.

Southern Pacific Attracts Attention.

Yesterday's advance in Southern Pacific preferred went far to convince those who had heard rumors that the retiring clause would be waived that they were correct. Nothing official was forthcoming, but many appeared to believe that there was no question but that some announcement would be made in the near future. One question which has been in the mind of those who did not believe that the preferred stock would be retired was in regard to the means of retiring it. It was figured out that if no more preferred stock were issued, there would be $40,000,000, the amount already outstanding, which would have to be taken care of. That it would be retired for cash was doubtful, but on the other hand no one could figure out just what particular security could be offered that would be more attractive than the preferred stock itself. In the event of the retiring clause being waived, and additional preferred stock issued, some believe that the offering price of the stock may be changed. Furthermore, the stock will have to establish another market level. On the assumption that the stock will not be retired and that $40,000,000 is outstanding, one price level might be established, but if $60,000,000 more are to be issued there will be a difference in the basis for estimating the market price.

Storing Troubles for Shorts.

Short selling has many advantages as a form of speculation. In the first place the trader who sells stocks short has no interest to pay, and if he has wisely selected the particular issue which he sells without possessing, his broker will have little trouble in borrowing. One house in the Street does quite a little business on the Curb, and two operators who are quietly active in a certain stock make their headquarters there. There has been considerable short selling of this particular stock, and many brokers who are looking for the stock to borrow call up this house, and sedom find any difficulty in obtaining the stock wanted. The result is that the house is lending a very considerable line of the stock. Inasmuch as it is itself a purchaser in the general market, it is funny at times to have the stock it has loaned to one house come in to it again on its own purchases. One can readily see that there is the possibility of trouble for the short interest if the stock were called.

Union Pacific's Financing.

Regular dividends on Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were not unexpected and excited no particular attention. No one has ventured to predict recently that there was any possibility of a reduction in the dividend of Union Pacific, but there have been suggestions that Southern Pacific might be reduced. Recently, however, the net earnings of that company have shown some improvement, and the course of the stock market was taken to mean the maintenance of the regular dividend. Some disappointment was felt by those least interested, because no announcement concerning the finances of the company was made. It has been all cut and dried in the financial district that the Directors would meet this week and announce just exactly what they were going to do in the matter of the new issue of bonds. Consequently Mr. Harriman's statement that there was nothing new to tell disappointed the prophets, at least.

THE COTTON MARKET.

July Leads General Advance—Closes at 15 to 33 Points Net Gain.

Sensational strength of July contracts was the feature in the cotton market yesterday, that position selling up to 170 points above the recent low record, and 74 points above the highest level reached by October contracts.

The close was at a net advance of 15@33 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 350,000 bales.

Memphis reported spot sales of 4,500 bales. Big English spot business was a bullish feature.

ANTI-OPTION LAWS CAUSE WIRE DISPUTE

Telegraph Companies Protest the Sending of Cotton Quotations to Southern Exchanges.

AGREEMENTS FORBID IT

Cotton Brokerage Houses with Wire Connections All Interested in the Controversy.

The anti-option laws in the South and the organization of Cotton Exchanges for the purpose of obviating the penalties under the anti-option laws have resulted in protests by the Western Union Telegraph and Postal Telegraph Companies that members of the New York Cotton Exchange in supplying cotton quotations to these Exchanges and other corporations were infringing the agreement between the Exchange and the telegraph companies.

The position taken by the telegraph companies has resulted in the issuance of an order by the New York Cotton Exchange to Haywood & Clark of New Orleans, members of the New York Exchange and one of the largest of the cotton wire houses, to discontinue supplying cotton quotations to Exchanges and other corporations. The firm maintains active wire connection with some of the leading New York cotton houses.

It is said that the passage of the anti-option laws caused the establishment of many Exchanges, for the laws forbid the posting of option quotations except on Exchanges. These improvised Exchanges have sought quotations from the New York Exchange, and the firm of Haywood & Clark, which maintains a wire system costing, it is understood, about $250,000 a year, undertook to supply quotations to a number of these Exchanges.

Under the contracts between the Cotton Exchange and the two telegraph companies the latter have the exclusive right to supply quotations to other Exchanges and to all other corporations, such as Boards of Trade. The members of the Exchange are limited to supplying quotations over their wires to private correspondents and to firms with which they have business relations.

An official of the Cotton Exchange said yesterday that the passage of the anti-option laws was not the cause of the issuance of the order to Haywood & Clark, although he presumed that these laws were responsible for an increase in the demand for quotations by Exchanges. The order affected only the firm of Haywood & Clark, he said, other members of the Exchange not having undertaken to supply quotations to these corporations. The firm recognized the right of the Exchange to issue the order, and ther was no disposition on its part to avoid compliance.

Logan & Bryan, another active wire house which maintains all told about 20,000 miles of private wires, was mentioned as having been interested in the movement to prevent the sending of quotations to the newly established Exchanges by other members of the New York Cotton Exchange. This firm, it is understood, cut out their wires from all the anti-option States as soon as the laws went into effect.

At the office of the firm it was said yesterday that it was not interested in the order issued by the Exchange; that having withdrawn themselves from the anti-option States they had taken no interest in what other firms may have been doing in those States. It was a matter, it was said, between the telegraph companies and the Exchange.

The anti-option laws have been passed by most of the Southern States, the exceptions being Tennessee and Louisiana.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee was somewhat irregular yesterday, but closed steady, net unchanged, to 5 points higher. Sales were reported of 15,000 bags.

The market opened quiet at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points, but ruled particularly steady in the late trading on a rapid reduction in visible supplies, light Brazilian receipts, and the steady demand upon port stocks from the interior of consuming countries.

The spot market was steady; 6⅝c for Rio No. 7.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

Stocks Buoyant on European Bourses, with Trading Active.

LONDON, May 13.—Money was in large supply and easy on the market to-day. Discounts were weaker and optimists talked of an early reduction in the Bank of England's rate of discount. But this is hardly likely in view of the lower rates of Continental Exchange on London, indicating a continued demand for gold.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was buoyant in most departments, cheap money and the prospects of its continued cheapness being the chief influence. Consols rose half a point and strengthened the other gilt-edged securities. Foreigners were strong, the good Continental support centring chiefly on Japanese bonds, while Mexican and Argentine rails improved.

American shares started steady and spurted over parity. Local and Continental houses, as well as professionals, bought. Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, and Grand Trunk received good attention. Later New York confirmed the advance and supported the market fairly. This caused a firm close.

Bar silver was steady at 24⅛ per ounce. Money was 1¼ to 1½ per cent.

PARIS, May 13.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were strong and trading was active.

BERLIN, May 13.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firmer.

EMPIRE STATE ENGINEERING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Empire State Engineering Company, with offices at 149 Broadway and works at 555 East 116th Street and at Rome, N. Y., by these creditors: National Brass and Copper Tube Company, $318; Henry F. Peake, $126, and Frederick M. Kreiner, $289. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and on May 12 allowed City Marshal Geraty to sell some of its property on an execution in favor of the De La Vergne Machine Company. The company is a New York corporation incorporated in March, 1902, with a capital stock of $500,000, to manufacture electrical devices for automobiles and truck propulsion, and more than $100,000 was spent in machinery. The company has a large plant at Rome, N. Y., against which bonds of $75,000 were issued. Since last October business, it is said, has been bad, collections slow, the company was short of ready money, and could not meet obligations coming due. Several judgments have been taken against the company. The liabilities for materials are reported to be about $20,000.

Reciprocity Treaties Are Applicable Only to Countries of Production.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers that paintings claimed to be dutiable under the terms of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Germany and shipped from France must be shown to be the products of Germany in order to obtain the reduction granted in the convention.

The painting was invoiced as "one oil painting by Allegri, a French artist." It was assessed for duty at 20 per cent. under the provision in the law for "paintings in oil." Although the importer filed an appeal, no appearance was made at the time set for the hearing before the board. Judge Waite, who writes the decision for the board overruling the contention of P. H. Petry & Co., the importers, says there is no evidence to support the claim that the painting is a product of Germany. On this account the rule is laid down that this fact would preclude the application of the Germany treaty unless it were proved that the painting was produced in Germany and destined to the United States from that country and merely shipped through France.

In overruling a protest filed by the Building Committee of the Lafayette County Court House of Darlington, Wis., the board decided that a marble statue of Matthew Murphy, a former Justice of the county, intended for use in the decoration of the new Court House, cannot be admitted to free entry, but must stand a duty of 15 per cent. under the terms of the reciprocity treaty with Italy.

Two claims for free entry were made by the committee, but inasmuch as the statue was not intended for "presentation" the board overrules the protest.

The Lawyers Mortgage Company is the only Mortgage Company that limits its mortgages to those on improved income-producing business or residence property within the limits of New York City. It rejects the extra risk involved in lending on vacant land and on special utilizations, such as theatres, churches, factories, etc.

It is the only Mortgage Company which limits its profits to one-half per cent. per annum. In Europe such limitation is required by law, and removes the temptation to accept doubtful loans in order to make greater profits.

Free to readers of The New York Times

There has been published in New York a remarkable little book entitled "INVESTMENT NAILS AND A HAMMER." This book is so absolutely new in its idea and so quaint and interesting in its printing, and its hammer HITS EVERY NAIL so squarely on the head that we couldn't resist buying our first copy; then we bought a hundred copies to give to business friends; then we bought out the whole edition. Now we have copies to spare and while they last you can have one FOR THE ASKING. There is no charge. Mention The New York Times and send in your name and address. The book will reach you by return mail. Address:

The Secretary, Jamaica Estates, 334 Fifth Ave., New York

WHAT IS JAMAICA ESTATES? This question is frequently asked by people who see announcements of the name. Jamaica Estates is a beautiful residence park in the very heart of the Borough of Queens, New York City. It is now about 25 minutes by Subway trains from the Wall Street district. When the Pennsylvania Long Island improvements are complete Jamaica Estates will be within 18 minutes of Herald Square and New York's uptown centres. The corporation managing the property has some very desirable residence plots for sale upon easy terms. If any reader of this note should be interested he can get further particulars by writing the Secretary.

SAYS M'DONALD HAS AN AXE TO GRIND

Commissioner Eustis Also Declares Contractor Told Him He Approved New Subways.

INTERBOROUGH RELATION

May Have Something to Do with His Change of Front, Utilities Commissioner Thinks.

"I think if you will dissect the letter of John B. McDonald to Controller Metz in regard to the new subways you will probably find a 'nigger in the wood pile,'" said Public Service Commissioner John E. Eustis to a TIMES reporter at his home last night. "Either Mr. McDonald's memory is short or he has some reason, of which I do not know, for having changed his mind within the last month or so.

"When the Public Service Commission indorsed the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route for subway extension it was entirely with a view to increasing the local traffic facilities in the best manner that had thus far been put before the commission in a practical manner. Soon after that indorsement, and after the consent of the commission had been given to the construction of the subway along Broadway and Lexington Avenue, I met Mr. McDonald on the street and, naturally, the conversation turned to the proposed new underground.

"'The commission has done a wise thing in indorsing that route,' said Mr. McDonald to me."

"'Yes, I think it a very good way out of the traffic congestion,' I replied.

"'You bet it was,' said Mr. McDonald, 'and you can be quite sure the route as at present laid out will prove a great money maker.'

Then the conversation turned to other things, and no mention was made by him of what he now calls attention to—that the cost of constructing the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line would be over $127,000,000, and that therefore the expense would be so great that the operation of it would prove a losing instead of a paying proposition.

"Neither did he say that the construction of the Fourth Avenue line, at a cost of $44,000,000, would prove a loss to the city. I am quite sure, however, that he said emphatically that the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line was sure to make a paying investment, in addition to adding to the traffic facilities."

"What about his suggestion of other subway lines that would prove better investments for the city and give better traffic facilities?" asked the reporter.

Mr. Eustis smiled and said: "Is not Mr. McDonald connected with the Interborough-Metropolitan system, which operates the original Subway, which was constructed by him? I think so. Mr. McDonald says that connections for extension of the subway system should be made from Forty-second Street via Lexington Avenue, Southern Boulevard, and Westchester Avenue to Pelham Bay Park. Who would naturally be supposed to operate this line, an independent company?

"Mr. McDonald suggests that the west side extension of the Subway should be from Broadway and Forty-fifth Street, down Seventh Avenue, Greenwich Street, and West Broadway, to a terminal on Battery Park. Who would operate this line?

"He suggests other extensions to connect with the Subway already in operation. Do these suggestions and his criticism of the Public Service Commission in indorsing the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route appear altogether unbiased? I hardly think so."

"What about the cost of the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route being so excessive that it would not prove a paying investment?" Mr. Eustis was asked.

"I have only the figures obtained by the engineers of the Public Service Commission on which to base a decision," said Mr. Eustis, "but the commission took up every phase of the case from these figures, and relying absolutely on their correctness, decided that the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route was not alone feasible, but would prove a good thing for the city as well as for such operating company as should lease it."

HALTS SUBWAY BRIDGE LOOP.

Mayor Finds Station Foundation Too Shallow for New Municipal Building.

Work on the Subway loop to connect the Williamsburg and Brooklyn Bridges was interrupted yesterday at the site of the new Municipal Building in Chambers Street, except so far as excavation is concerned, by order of the Public Service Commission on receipt of a communication from the Mayor.

When the plans for the loop through Centre Street were drawn up and the contract let to William Bradley by the old Rapid Transit Commission it was not then intended that the Subway station should have foundations as deep as will be necessary for the new Municipal Building, which was planned after the loop.

The contractor had already carried his excavation to the depth planned for the concrete foundations for the new Subway Station, and it was clear that if he went on with the work under the original plans much of it would have to be undone. An informal conference was held yesterday by Mayor McClellan, Bridge Commissioner Stevenson, and representatives of the Public Service Commission, which resulted in the Mayor writing to the Commission a letter suggesting that the work stop until further plans are agreed upon.

OPPOSES SIDE DOOR CARS.

Manager Hedley Says They Would Not Help in Handling Subway Crush.

Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Interborough, objected yesterday before Commissioner Eustis of the Public Service Commission to the equipping of all cars of the Subway with side doors, one near each end.

"I do not believe," he said, "that any possible benefit would justify the expenditure the change would cost, and, after all, it would only be a botch job."

He agreed with Bion J. Arnold, the expert of the commission, that to transform a steel car would cost $2,000, but estimated at $2,220 the cost of alteration of wooden cars, which Mr. Arnold put at $1,500. As there are 800 cars, the whole job would cost $1,800,000. To accomplish it, it would be necessary, he maintained, to cut the cars practically in three pieces, and to add so much weight as to make their operation more costly and less speedy.

Moreover, Mr. Hedley has doubts as to the possibility of getting New Yorkers to take kindly to side doors.

"If a man just squeezes in at Fourteenth Street, at Grand Central he is not going to force his way up the car to get out."

"What about the man in the middle of the car now," asked Commissioner Eustis, "who wants to get out of a crowded car?"

"Well, often he isn't able to get out unless he moves down before he reaches his station. People are often carried beyond their stations," answered Mr. Hedley.

In reply to Arthur Dubois, counsel for the commission, Mr. Hedley admitted that conditions are now disgraceful, but thought the present cars are about as good as can be devised for the Subway. An objection to side doors was, in his opinion, the chance of accidents at the inward curve of stations.

B. J. Arnold, the engineer whose experience in Chicago has been continually cited by the commission on the side-door question, defended himself against a rigorous cross-examination by A. A. Gardner, counsel for the Interborough. He did not call himself, he said, an expert because of the constant misuse of the term, but he had had great experience in handling crowds on the Intramural Railroad at the World's Fair in Chicago and other roads near that city.

"Were they as great as New York crowds?" asked Mr. Gardner.

SUBWAY STATIONS IN DEMAND.

Normal College Makes Special Plea for One Into the Building.

The claims of the Normal College for Subway accommodation were put before the Public Service Commission yesterday, when it held a hearing to receive representations concerning the location of stations on the proposed Lexington Avenue line.

John De Witt Warner spoke in favor of a station either at Sixty-ninth or Sixty-eighth Street and suggested that a connection might be built from the Subway right into the college. He pointed out that as Fire Headquarters are in Sixty-seventh Street it would be as well not to place the station there.

His views were supported by President George S. Davis of the Normal College and Thomas C. Wood. Then Ralph Wolf of the Blackwell's Island Bridge Protective Association urged that the express station in that section of the city had better be put at Fifty-ninth Street than Forty-second, which was already well looked after.

Charles H. Nally appeared to urge that Eighty-sixth Street should be taken as the site of a local station. He represented the Twelfth and Nineteenth Ward Real Estate Owners' Association. J. S. Schwab was in favor of Ninety-sixth Street and E. A. Treadwell of 161st Street. For 121st Street J. Howard Cowperthwait spoke, advancing as one of his reasons the great advance in retail trade in Lexington Avenue from 116th Street north.

James L. Wells had a complete plan for the Jerome Avenue branch of the new line. He would have the stations placed at 149th, 161st, and 174th Streets and at Burnside Avenue, Fordham Road, Kingsbridge Road, and either Southern Boulevard or Van Courtlandt Avenue.

BID UNDER CITY'S FIGURES.

Politicians Think Pearsons May Not Know Cost of City Work.

In bidding for the contract for the construction of the Wallkill pressure tunnel, part of the Catskill Aqueduct line, the English firm of S. Pearson & Son asked $1,206,000 less than the Board of Water Supply's own engineers had estimated the work could be done for. The Pearson firm bid $3,305,000 and the Board estimated the cost of the work at $4,511,000. The Bradley Contracting Company, who were nearest to the Pearson figures, put in a bid of about $500,000 higher.

It is supposed that the low figures of the English firm are the result of inexperience as to the conditions under which they will have to work. Up to not their principal experience outside of their own kingdom has been in Mexico and on the Pennsylvania tunnels. In Mexico they could get labor at their own rate. On the Pennsylvania tunnels they had merely the ordinary conditions affecting labor in this city to deal with. On a city job, however, they will not be able to work their men more than eight hours daily, and this and other regulations will increase the cost of the work greatly. The Bradley Construction Company has done a good deal of work for the city, and is fully aware of what it has undertaken. The English firm, it is thought at the City Hall, may have underestimated some of the factors in the problem.

Congested Manhattan Looks to The Bronx.

The accessibility of The Bronx to Manhattan renders its development a matter of ease and certainty in the immediate future. The boroughs are practically one and the prosperity of Manhattan is surely, and by no means slowly, extending to its beautiful and extensive northern neighbor. In The New York Times, next Sunday, The Bronx's representative men will describe some leading features of this most interesting section of the Great City, including the new and proposed transportation facilities, with a map, the charms of the small residences raised and in course of construction, The Bronx's desirability as a home centre, its factory development—special articles by special writers:—

METZ HUNTING FOR CITY'S DEBT LIMIT

Corporation Counsel Not Certain About Deduction of $6,000,000 Water Bonds.

TAKES CONTROLLER'S VIEW

No Doubt That $22,000,000 Sinking Funds Must Be Reckoned in the Debt.

Corporation Counsel Pendleton rendered an opinion yesterday to Controller Metz on the city's debt limit. He was asked whether the city could deduct from the amount of its outstanding indebtedness $6,662,498 of water bonds and whether it ought to include some $22,000,000 of revenue bonds, which have been issued from time to time against taxes, now overdue.

The Corporation Counsel decided that it would not be advisable to set to work on the assumption that the $6,000,000 water bonds might be deducted, although he admitted that the law was not clear, and it might be possible to obtain a favorable decision on this point. He had no doubt that the $22,000,000 of revenue bonds must be counted in as part of the city's debt. In his opinion Mr. Pendleton has agreed with the position taken all along by the Controller.

By a special amendment to the Constitution, which came into effect at the beginning of the year, the $32,937,318 of water bonds have not been counted in computing the city's debt limit. But $6,662,498 of these bonds are held by the Sinking Fund, and it has been contended by many that these should be deducted a second time from the city's gross debt in order to find its legal debt limit.

With regard to $748,500 of these $6,662,498 bonds, Corporation Counsel Pendleton has no doubt whatever. They are held by the Sinking Fund in order to amortize the debt created by the issue of the water bonds, and, therefore, certainly cannot be deducted a second time from the gross debt.

He is less certain about the other $5,913,998. When city bonds, to which the Sinking Fund applies, are held by the Sinking Fund, they are rightly deducted from the gross debt, but in this case this rule does not apply. There are, he points out, no judicial decisions which cover the matter, and until the courts have spoken it is impossible for him to be certain of the view they would take. Consequently Mr. Pendleton advises that it would not be wise to assume that the bonds would be deducted a second time.

Commenting upon this decision Controller Metz said:

"The Corporation Counsel has given the same opinion as Corporation Counsel Wareham ten years ago. He agrees with the view I have always taken of the matter. We should not be safe to suppose the $6,000,000 could be deducted twice until the courts had so decided. After all it does not make much difference; $6,000,000 in a case of this sort is a bagatelle."

OLD SWEETHEARTS WED.

Both Had Previously Married, but Chance Threw Them Together Again.

A license to marry was granted yesterday to Charles P. White and Mrs. Sadie E. Potts, both of 216 West 140th Street, and last night they were married in the New York Presbyterian Church at 128th Street and Seventh Avenue by the Rev. Duncan McMillen. That much the records show. But there is a romance behind the story of the marriage.

Twenty-two years ago Charles P. White and Sadie Potts lived in the town of Tivoli, N. Y. White was then 19 years old and Sadie Potts was 16. They loved each other and became engaged. But Sadie's mother was opposed to White and insisted that her daughter marry her first cousin, Philip Potts, and the daughter obeyed. A little while after that White left Tivoli and married Mary Ellsworth.

Two years ago Mrs. White died, leaving a daughter, Ethel White. It was not long after the death of Mrs. White that White went back to his old home in Tivoli. Mrs. Potts was there on a visit. He had not seen her since her marriage. They met. In February Mrs. Potts was granted a divorce from Philip Potts in Poughkeepsie. She came to New York and has since lived at the West 140th Street house.

WANT FIRE LIMITS EXTENDED.

Underwriters Opposed by Builders at Building-Code Revision Hearing.

The extension of fire limits and the restriction of frame buildings in the city were discussed yesterday before a public hearing of the Committee on Fire Limits of the Building Code Revision Commission in the Aldermanic chamber. The New York Board of Fire Underwriters, through C. Shallcross, urged the extension of the fire limits so as to take in the whole of the city, and objected particularly to shingle-roofed houses, wooden factories, and rows of frame buildings.

Representatives, however, of the Bronx and the outlying parts of Brooklyn urged that such restrictions would press heavily upon the development of their neighborhoods. Ex-Tenement House Commissioner Bush thought that the commission would have done enough if it drew the limits around the first twenty-eight wards of Brooklyn, but thought it a disgrace that frame buildings should still be permitted in Brownsville.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters objected to the fire limits as injuring their trade, and President Van Clief of the Staten Island Chamber of Commerce thought that in Richmond the fire limits should first be applied to Stapleton and Tompkinsville and then to New Brighton, West New Brigton, and Port Richmond.

MRS. I. E. LAMB SEEKS DIVORCE

Referee Appointed to Hear Case Against Playwright and Song Writer.

Supreme Court Justice Davis appointed Thomas W. Churchill of 74 Broadway yesterday as referee to take testimony in a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Isabel E. Lamb against her husband, Arthur J. Lamb. She says she was married on June 6, 1907, and charges her husband with misconduct at times subsequent to Sept. 26, 1907.

Mrs. Lamb describes her husband as a playwright and song writer, and says his income is $8,000 to $10,000 a year. In support of this she presented affidavits from Harry Von Tilzer, who swears he paid Mr. Lamb as much as $1,925 in one year, and other music publishers to a similar effect. Mrs. Lamb says her husband got $450 for the song "Splash Me," made popular by Alice Lloyd.

Mr. Lamb denies his wife's charges and says he is $6,000 in debt.

LAWSON IN CONTROL.

Elected President of the Bay State Gas Company.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 13.—Thomas W. Lawson of Boston appeared to be in entire control when a special meeting of the stockholders of the Bay State Gas Company convened to-day for the purpose of electing Directors and determining the future policy of the company.

J. Edward Addicks, the originator of the company and its directing spirit for some time, was not present. Mr. Lawson was chosen temporary Chairman without opposition, and the following were elected Directors: Thomas W. Lawson and his private secretary, E. A. McSweeney, both of Boston; J. Frank Allee, S. John Abbott, Newell Ball, and James V. McCommons of Delaware, and W. Harry Miller of Philadelphia.

A total of 2,172,512 shares were represented at the meeting, out of a total of 3,691,000.

A resolution was adopted favoring the turning over of the money in the hands of the company's receiver, on his final settlement, to the company, and not to the stockholders individually. The Directors subsequently met and elected Thomas W. Lawson President, J. Frank Allee Vice President, and W. H. Miller of Philadelphia Secretary and Treasurer.

REGULAR HARRIMAN DIVIDENDS

Directors of Union and Southern Pacific Vote the Usual Per Cents.

The Directors of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroads met yesterday and declared the regular quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent. on Union and 1½ on Southern, but took no action regarding financing by the two roads. When questioned after the meeting regarding the roads' financial plan, E. H. Harriman said that the Union Pacific was in a comfortable position, and that it was amply able to arrange its financing. This would be done at the proper time and under proper conditions. He would not commit himself regarding any Southern Pacific financing. To a group of newspaper men Mr. Harriman said:

"You fellows are trying to do our financing for us. We are not in need of any money now and we can wait for a better market."

The reports regarding proposed financing by the Southern Pacific, which Mr. Harriman would not discuss, included one that it would be done through an issue of preferred stock, and that in connection with the sale of another block of this stock, which pays 7 per cent., the company would forego the privilege which it now has of retiring the preferred stock at 115 at any time up to July 1, 1910. The stock rose 8 points yesterday, and closed with a net gain of 4⅞ points.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Manufacturers' Failure to Agree Causes Reduction in Price of Pig Iron.

The failure of the ironmakers at their meeting last week to get together on the question of pig iron prices is the chief subject of comment by the trade weeklies. The Iron Age says:

> All semblance of co-operation among makers of foundry pig iron in maintaining prices has disappeared, and many of those who have steadily refused to meet the slowly declining market are now offering foundry at the prices which have been really ruling for some time. In isolated instances even these prices have been shaded by producers who were acting in harmony with the others.
>
> The pressure of the Southern makers is on all markets. No. 2 foundry iron at $11.25, Birmingham, means $15.50 delivered at tidewater points, Philadelphia and New York, and $16 in New England harbors, which is $1 per ton and more below the lowest which Eastern Pennsylvania furnaces have yet been willing to go.
>
> The finished trade on the whole is rather dull. Buyers are holding back to some extent in the hope that a readjustment of prices may soon be made.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> The effects of the last New York meeting of pig iron and ore interests have been favorable. The action in removing all obligation to maintain prices by those interests which have been acting in harmony and taking very few orders has been followed by a lowering of quotations by the companies which had been asking the highest prices, and there is now a general feeling that bottom prices have been reached. This conviction is strengthened by the firm attitude of ore interests in declining to recede from their position or make any concessions to buyers of ore.

$15,000,000 NOTE ISSUE.

This Sum Needed for the Financing of the Southern Railway.

The Southern Railway's note issue to provide for the road's requirements, it became known yesterday, will amount to $15,000,000. The notes will run for three years and carry 6 per cent. interest. The notes will be secured by development and general mortgage bonds and other collateral, and will be convertible into the general mortgage bonds at 80 at the end of the first year, at 82½ at the end of the second year, and at 85 at the end of the third year.

The notes have been taken by J. P. Morgan & Co. with the co-operation, it is understood, of the First National Bank. The proceeds of the notes will be used to retire about $3,000,000 of maturing debenture issues and for the carrying on of improvement and development work.

The collateral for the notes consists of $20,000,000 of improvement and general mortgage bonds, $3,000,000 of Tennessee Central bonds, and $2,000,000 of Virginia & Southwestern bonds. The new notes were offered in the Street yesterday at 98.

The first opportunity to subscribe to the new note issue is to be given to the members of the syndicate which underwrote the first issue of $15,000,000 of the development and general mortgage bonds, practically all of this block of bonds having been left in the hands of the syndicate.

RAILWAY MERGER SUCCEEDS.

Officials Announce That the Plan for the Mexican Lines Is Complete.

This formal notice of the success of the Mexican railway merger plan was issued yesterday:

> At an extraordinary general meeting of the Mexican Central Railway Securities Company, Limited, in London on May 4 the debenture holders of that company approved the resolutions necessary to permit of the deposit by the Trustees of the company of its holdings of $37,937,000 Mexican Central consolidated 4 per cent. bonds under the plan of readjustment and union of the Mexican Central Railway Company, Limited, and National Railroad of Mexico, dated April 6, 1908.
>
> The question of the authority of the Trustees under the direction of a committee of the debenture holders to make such deposit having been submitted to the court in London, a decision favorable to the making of such deposit has been rendered by the court.
>
> The committee of the Mexican Central Railway Securities Company, Limited, which has been appointed by the debenture holders to effect the deposit of the securities above stated consists of five members, including Robert Fleming, who has recently been in New York. Mr. Fleming sailed for Europe on May 9, and it is expected that the holdings of the Securities Company will be deposited in the course of the coming week, which will be practically the last step to be taken in connection with the plan.

It was stated authoritatively that a large majority of all classes of securities had been deposited in favor of the plan.

THE ALLEN'S DEATH CONCEALS NO CRIME

That Is the Indication of the Autopsy, but Inquiry Will Go Further.

GAMBLER HAD DELUSIONS

Often Thought People Sought His Life—How Greenwich Village Takes His End, Wealthy and Miserable.

There is little likelihood of a charge of murder growing out of the death of The Allen, the gambler, on Tuesday night in the flat of his adopted daughter, Mrs. Clarence Owens, at 17 West Eighth Street. The family row which disturbed the death-bed hour of the old poolroom keeper resulted yesterday in Coroner Harburger ordering Dr. O'Hanlon to hold an autopsy and send the vital organs to Dr. Larkin of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the contents of the stomach to Prof. George A. Ferguson, Professor of Chemistry at Columbia. This was done, and the autopsy showed no evidence of poisoning.

The cause of the investigation by the Coroner, it was said at the house of Mrs. Owens yesterday, was the disappointment of brothers and half brothers of the dead gambler in the matter of the disposition of his estate. The last days of The Allen were full of misery. A victim of locomotor ataxia, he was also the victim of another disease which robbed him of the little strength of his remaining days. His professional nurse, Charles J. Beery, said yesterday that his mind gave way, and he suffered from delusions about people being "after him" to murder him by poison or otherwise.

No. 80 Sixth Avenue, where Allen amassed his fortune and defied the police for more than twenty years, where he was raided times without number, is a block below Eighth Street.

Across the avenue a portly bartender said yesterday that there had been nothing doing in the poolroom game in the neighborhood since Allen informed District Attorney Jerome about two years ago that he had decided to quit.

All through the section, where the little backyard Summer gardens are just opening for the season, the history of The Allen was discussed yesterday, and guesses were made as to the amount of money he had taken from the poolroom frequenters in his score of years of gambling activity.

All morning there was a straggling of men to the house of Mrs. Owens, in Eighth Street. They were for the most part flashily dressed. Some of them were red-nosed and with shiny derbies, and coats polished by years of wear.

"What's your name?" Beery, the nurse, in charge of the door, would ask.

"Just tell Mrs. Owens it's Frank," one of them answered. He was a picture of the gambling-house helper out of a job, but still faithful to the memory of an employer who had gained his affection and admiration by beating out the police and making a fortune at the game.

"It's Jim," another whispered, as he slid inside the doorway, hat in hand. He, too, was the worse for the times in clothes and in feature.

At the house it was said that the will would not be read until after the funeral, for which arrangements had not been completed.

Shipments Renewed and Wall Street Expects Others Soon.

The gold taken from the assay office yesterday for shipment to Europe amounted to $5,750,000. Of this $2,500,000 was taken by the National City Bank, $1,500,000 by Lazard Frères, $1,000,000 by Goldman, Sachs & Co., and $750,000 by the National Bank of Commerce. This brings the total gold engagement on this movement, which began in the middle of April, up to $17,250,000.

A resumption of gold exports by to-day's steamer had been expected in Wall Street, but the amount of gold taken was somewhat larger than had been anticipated. Further shipments are considered likely.

Manhattan Life Directors Elected.

The Manhattan Life Insurance Company elected Directors of the third class yesterday whose terms expire in May, 1911. They were George W. Quintard, Edward A. Walton, Spencer H. Smith, Benjamin Griffin, David H. Rowland, Edward H. Schell, John C. Tappin, Robert M. Gallaway, Albert C. Bostwick, John Sherman Hoyt, Edwin S. Schenck, and Lowell M. Palmer. Jacques Huber was elected a Director in the first class, whose term of office expires May, 1909, to succeed O. G. Waldridge, deceased. Henry B. Stokes was made President.

Big Jump in July Cotton.

July contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange yesterday advanced approximately $2.50 per bale over the closing prices of Tuesday. July cotton sold at 9.90, or 170 points above the recent low record. The advance was called a "corner," made possible by the strength of the Southern market. Realizing sales late in the day caused moderate reactions and the close was a net advance of from 15 to 35 points.

YOUNG McINTYRE EXAMINED.

Order Obtained Admitting Subpoena Servers to Father, in Sanitarium.

Counsel for various creditors of the suspended Stock Exchange firm of T. A. McIntyre & Co. failed again yesterday to get Thomas A. McIntyre, the head of the concern, before a commission of the United States District Court, where hearings are in progress in bankruptcy proceedings. An order was obtained from Judge Hough of the United States Circuit Court restraining Miss Anna Allston, at whose private sanitarium at 26 West Sixty-first Street Mr. McIntyre is now stopping, from excluding the process servers from her premises. This order was obtained by Attorney Ernst of the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, which represents the receivers of McIntyre & Co. The much wanted witness will be on hand to-day.

Yesterday the principal witness was Thomas A. McIntyre, Jr., who was a member of the firm from May 1, 1907, to the time of the failure.

Young McIntyre brought into the business a seat on the Produce Exchange, a seat on the Cotton Exchange, $3,000 in cash, and his experience. In return for this investment, and for his services as floor representative on the Cotton Exchange, he was to receive a salary of $10,000 a year and 8 per cent. of the profits of McIntyre & Co.

Mr. McIntyre testified yesterday that his father was "the boss," and was so known in the office. He admitted that he had seen his father at Miss Allston's sanitarium yesterday morning, but declared that the elder McIntyre was in bed and unable to discuss business.

Mr. Ernst got track yesterday of another McIntyre automobile, a Martini car, which belonged to Thomas A. McIntyre until about the time of the failure, and has since been in the possession of Charles Van Baer, a musician. There will be another hearing at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

San Francisco Votes $18,200,000 Bonds.

Colvin D. Brown, Secretary of the California Society of New York, received a telegram yesterday saying that San Francisco had voted $18,200,000 worth of bonds for municipal improvements. Of this amount, $5,200,000 will go into an auxiliary water system for fire protection, $4,000,000 for a sewer system, $5,000,000 for more schools, $2,000,000 for hospitals, $1,000,000 for a Hall of Justice and County Jail, and $1,000,000 for a garbage disposal plant. The charter of the city allowing a bonded indebtedness of 15 per cent. of the assessment roll, the city may still borrow $46,000,000, as the total debt of the city, including the new bonds, is $21,636,400, while the assessment this year will probably be $450,000,000, giving a borrowing capacity of $67,500,000.

EXPECTS RAILROAD WAGE CUT

Henry Finck Thinks Men Will See Necessity for Accepting Less Pay.

Henry Finck, Chairman of the Norfolk & Western, who has been through five industrial crises, said yesterday that he thought railroad employes would, a little further along in the present depression, consent to a reduction in wages. "Railroads can be depended upon," he said, "not to do anything to hurt traffic, and the way to get more traffic in times like these is not to raise rates. I do not mean to say that many rates are not lower than they should be, but these are subject to a gradual adjustment all along the line.

"In former periods of depression it has been the policy of the railroads to lower rates rather than to raise them. A general increase could have been made in boom times, but now it cannot be made until business revives.

"When rates were lowered in the past in response to economic conditions wages were reduced at the same time, and I recall in the depression of 1902-03, when I was receiver of two railroads, I appealed to the men to accept a reduction of wages first for three months, and then for a longer period, and they accepted the curtailment. It seems to me that the men will come to the same idea of the situation now, and they might have accepted lower wages before this had they not been encouraged to hold out."

25 Per Cent. Deposit Dividend To-day.

Payment of the 25 per cent. dividend on the deposits of the National Bank of North America, which closed its doors on Jan. 27, will be made to-day. The checks on the Sub-Treasury, signed by the proper Federal authorities, arrived at the bank yesterday, and all those who present their certificates will be paid off at once. Receiver Hanna said yesterday that the payment involved approximately $700,000.
